ROMANCE, &c.

The First Book.

The First Day.

On an Evening before Easter-Day, I sat at a Table, and having (as my Custom was) in my humble Prayer sufficiently conversed with my Creator, and considered many great Mysteries (whereof the Father of Lights his Majesty had shewn me not a few) and being now ready to prepare in my Heart, together with my dear Paschal Lamb, a small unleavened, unleavened Cake; All on a sudden ariseth so horrible a Tempest, that I imagined no other but that through its mighty force, the Hill whereon my little House was founded, would flye in pieces. But in as much as this, and the like from the Devil (who had done me many a spight) was no new thing to me; I took courage, and persisted in my Meditation, till some body (after an unusual manner, touched me on the Back; whereupon I was so hugely terrified, that I durst hardly look about me; yet I shewed my self as cheerful as (in the like Occurrences) humane frailty would permit; Now the same thing still twich-ing me several times by the Coat, I looked back, and behold it was a fair and glorious Lady, whose Garments were all Skye-colour, and curiously (like Heaven) bespangled with golden Stars, in her right Hand she bare a Trumpet of beaten Gold, whereon a Name was ingraven (which I could well read in) but am as yet forbidden to reveal it.
In her left Hand she had a great bundle of Letters of all Languages, which she (as I afterwards understood) was to carry into all Countries. She had also large and beautiful Wings, full of Eyes throughout, wherewith she could mount a loft, and flye swifter than any Eagle. I might perhaps been able to take further notice of her, but because she staid so small a time with me, and terror and amazement still possessed me, I was fain to be content. For as soon as I turned about, she turned her Letters over and over, and at length drew out a small one, which with great Reverence she laid down upon the Table, and without giving one word, departed from me. But in her mounting upward, she gave so mighty a blast on her gallant Trumpet, that the whole Hill echoed thereof, and for a full quarter of an hour after, I could hardly hear my own Words.

In so unlooked for an adventure I was at a loss, how either to advise, or assist my poor self, and therefore fell upon my Knees, and besought my Creator to permit nothing contrary to my Eternal Happiness to befall me; whereupon with fear and trembling, I went to the Letter, which was now so heavy, as had it been mere Gold, it could hardly have been so weighty. Now as I was diligently viewing it, I found a little Seal, whereupon a curious Cross with this Inscription, IN HOC SIGNO † VINCES, was ingraven.

Now as soon as I espied this Sign I was the more comforted, as not being ignorant that such a Seal was little acceptable, and much less useful to the Devil.
Devil. Whereupon I tenderly opened the Letter, and within it, in an Azure Field, in Golden Letters, found the following Verses written.

This day, this day, this, this The Royal Wedding is.
Art thou thereto by Birth inclin'd,
And unto joy of God design'd, Then may'st thou to the Mountain tend,
Whereon three stately Temples stand,
And there see all from end to end.
Keep watch, and ward,
Thy self regard;
Unless with diligence thou bathe,
The Wedding can't thee harmless save:
He'll dammage have that here delays;
Let him beware, too light that weighs.

Underneath stood Sponsus and Sponsa.

As soon as I had read this Letter, I was presently like to have fainted away, all my Hair stood an end, and a cold Sweat trickled down my whole Body. For although I well perceived that this was the appointed Wedding, whereof seven Years before I was acquainted in a bodily Vision, and which now so long time I had with great earnellearnestness attended, and which lastly, by the account and calculation of the Planets, I had most diligently observed, I found so to be, yet could I never foresee that it must happen under so grievous and perilous conditions. For whereas I before imagined that to be a well-come, and acceptable Guest, I needed only be ready to appear at the Wedding; I was now directed to Divine Providence, of which until this time I was never certain. I also found by my self, the more I examined my self, that in my Head there was nothing but gross misunderstanding, and blindness in mysterious things, so that I was not able to comprehend even those things which lay under my Feet, and which I daily conversed with, much less that I should be born to the searching out, and understanding of the Secrets of Nature; since in my opinion Nature might everywhere find a more virtuous Disciple, to whom to intrust her precious, though temporary, and changeable Treasures. I found also that my bodily behaviour, and outward good Conversation, and Brotherly Love toward my Neighbour, was not duly purged and cleansed; Moreover the tickling of the Flesh manifested it self, whose affection was bent only to Pomp and Bravery, and Worldly Pride, and not to the good of mankind; And I was always contriving how by this art I might in a short time abunddantly increase my profit and advantage, rear up stately Palaces, make my self an everlasting Name in the World, and other the like Carnal designs. But the obscure Words concerning the Three Temples did particularly afflict me, which I was not able to make out by any after-Speculation, and perhaps should not yet, had they not been wonderfully revealed to me. Thus sticking betwixt Hope and Fear, examining my self again and again, and finding only my own Frailty and Impotency, not being in any wise able to succour my self, and exceedingly amazed at the fore-mentioned threatning; at length I betook my self to my usual and most secure course; after I had finished my earnest and most fervent prayer, I laid me down in my Bed, that so perchance my good Angel by the Divine permission might appear
pear, and (as it had sometimes formerly happened) instruct me in this doubtful affair, which to the praise of God, my own good, and my Neighbours faithful and hearty warning and amendment did now likewise fall out. For I was yet scarce fallen asleep, when me-thought, I, together with a numberless multitude of men lay fettered with great Chains in a dark Dungeon, where in without the least glimps of Light, we swarmed like Bees one over another, and thus rendered each others affliction more grievous. But although neither I, nor any of the rest could see one jot; yet I continually heard one heaving himself above the other, when his Chains or Fetters were become ever so little lighter, though none of us had much reason to shelve up the other, since we were all Captive Wretches. Now as I with the rest had continued a good while in this affliction, and each was still reproaching the other with his blindness and captivity, at length we heard many Trumpets sounding together, and Kettle-Drums beating so artificially thereto, that it even revived and rejoiced us in our Calamity. During During this Noise the cover of the Dungeon was from above lifted up, and a little light let down unto us. Then first might truly have been discerned the bustle we kept, for all went pelle, melle, and he who perchance had too much heaved up himself, was forced down again under the others Feet. In brief, each one strove to be uppermost, neither did I my self linger, but with my weighty Fetters flipt up from under the rest, and then heaved my self upon a Stone, which I laid hold of; howbeit, I was several times caught at by others, from whom yet as well as I might, with Hands and Feet I still guarded my self. For we imagined no other but that we should all be set at Liberty, which yet fell out quite otherwise. For after the Nobles, who looked upon us from above through the Hole, had a while recreated themselves with this our struggling and lamenting, a certain hoary-headed Ancient Man called to us to be quiet, and having scarce obtained it, began (as I still remember) thus to say on.
If wretched Mankind would forbear T h e m s e l v e s so to uphold,
Then sure on them much good confer, My righteous Mother would:
But since the same will not infue,
They must in Care and Sorrow rue,
And still in Prison lie.

Howbeit, my dear Mother will Their Follies over-see,
Her choicest Goods permitting still Too much in the Light to be.

Though very rarely it may seem That they may still keep some esteem,
Which else would pass for Forgery.

Wherefore in honour of the Feast
We this day solemnize,
That so her Grace may be increas'd,
A good deed she'll devise.

For now a Cord shall be let down,
And whosoever can hang thereon,
Shall freely be releas'd.

He had scarce done speaking, when an Antient Matron commanded her Servants to let down the Cord seven times into the Dungeon, and draw up whosoever could hang upon it. Good God!
that I could sufficiently describe the hurry
hurry and disquiet that then arose amongst us; For every one strove to get to the Cord, and yet only hindered each other. But after seven Minutes a sign was given by a little Bell, whereupon at the first Pull the Servants drew up four. At that time I could not come near the Cord by much, having (as is before-mentioned) to my huge mis-fortune, betaken my self to a Stone at the Wall of the Dungeon, and thereby was disabled to get to the Cord which descended in the middle. The Cord was let down the second time, but divers, because their Chains were too heavy, and their Hands too tender, could not keep their hold on the Cord, but with themselves beat down many another, who else perhaps might have held fast enough; Nay, many an one was forcibly pulled off by another, who yet could not himself get at it; so mutually envious were we even in this our great misery. But they of all others most moved my Compassion, whose weight was so heavy, that they tore their very hands from their Bodies, and yet could not get up. Thus it came to pass that at these five times very very few were drawn up. For as soon as the sign was given, the Servants were so nimble at the draught, that the most part tumbled one upon another, and the Cord, this time especially, was drawn up very empty. Whereupon the greatest part, and even I my self, despaired of Redemption, and called upon God that he would have pity on us, and (if possible) deliver us out of this obscurity, who also then heard some of us: For when the Cord came down the sixth time, some of them hung themselves fast upon it; and whilst in the drawing up, the Cord swung from one side to the other, it (perhaps by the will of God) came to me, which I suddenly catching, got uppermost above all the rest, and so at length beyond hope came out; whereat I exceedingly rejoiced, so that I perceived not the Wound, which in the drawing up I received on my Head by a sharp Stone, till I with the rest who were released (as was always before done) was fain to help at the seventh and last pull, at which time through straining, the Blood ran down all over my Cloathes, which I nevertheless for joy regarded not.

Now
Now when the last draught whereon the most of all hung, was finished: The Matron caused the Cord to be laid away, and willed her aged Son (at which I much wondred) to declare her Resolution to the rest of the Prisoners: who after he had a little bethought himself spoke, thus unto them.

Ye Children dear
All present here,
What is but now compleat and done,
Was long before resolved on,
What er' my Mother of great Grace
To each on both sides here hath shown,
May never Discontent mis-place;
The joyful time is drawing on,
When everyone Shall equal be,
None Wealthy, none in Penury,
Who er' receiveth great Commands Hath work enough to fill his Hands.
Who er' with much hath trusted been,
'Tis well if he may save his Skin.
Wherefore, your Lamentations cease,
What ist' to wait for some few days?

As soon as he had finished these Words, the Cover was again put to and locked down, and the Trumpets and Kettle-Drums began afresh, yet could not the noise thereof be so loud, but that the bittet Lamentation of the Prisoners which arose in the Dungeon was heard above all, which soon also caused my Eyes to run-over. Presently after the Antient Matron, together with her Son fate down upon seats before prepared, and commanded the Redeemed should be told. Now as soon as she understood the number, and had written it down in a Gold-yellow Tablet, she demanded every ones Name, which were also written down by a little page; having viewed us all, one after another, she sighed, and spoke to her Son, so as I could well hear her, "Ah how Hartily am I grieved for the poor Men in the Dungeon! I would to God I durst release them all, whereunto her Son replied; 'It is Mother thus ordained of God, against whom we may not contend. In case we all of us were Lords, and possessed all the Goods upon Earth, and were seated at Table, who would there then be to be bring up the Service? whereupon his Mother held her peace, but soon after she said; "Well, however, let these be freed from their Fetters; which was likewise presently done, and I, except a few was the last;

yet could I not refrain, but (though I still looked upon the rest, bowed my self before the Antient Matron, and thanked God that through her, had graciously and fatherly vouchsafed to bring me out of such Darkness into the Light: After me the rest did likewise, to the satisfaction of the Matron. Lastly, to every one was given a piece of Gold for a Remembrance, and to spend by the way, on the one side whereof was stamped the Rising Sun, on the other (as I remember) these three Letters, D L S. And therewith every one had Licence to depart; and was sent to his own Business with this annexed Intimation, That We to the Glory of God should benefit our Neighbours, and reserve in silence what we had been intrusted with, which we also promised to do, and so departed one from another;
But in regard of the Wounds which the Fetters had caused me, I could not well go forward, but halted on both Feet, which the Matron presently espying, laughing at it, and calling me again to her said thus to me, My Son, let not this defect afflict thee, but call to mind thy Infirmities, and therewith thank God who hath permitted thee even in this World, and in the state of thy imperfection to come into so high a light, and keep these wounds for my sake. Whereupon the Trumpets began again to sound, which so affrighted me that I awoke, and then first perceived that it was onely a Dream, which yet was so strongly impressed upon my imagination, that I was still perpetually troubled about it, and me thought I was yet sensible of the wounds on my Feet. Howbeit, by all these things I well understood that God had vouchsafed that I should be present at this mysterious and hidden Wedding; wherefore with Child-like confidence I returned thanks to his Divine Majesty, & besought him, that he would further preserve me in his fear, that he would daily fill my Heart with Wisdom and Understanding, and at length graciously (without my desert) conduct me to the desired end. Hereupon I prepared my self for the way, put on my white linnen Coat, girded my Loyns, with a Blood-red Ribbon bound cross-ways over my Shoulder:
In my Hat I stuck four red Roses, that I might the sooner by this Token be taken notice of amongst the throng. For food I took Bread, Salt, and Water, which by the counsel of an understanding person I had at certain times used, not without profit, in the like occurrences. But before I parted from my Cottage, I first in this my dress, and wedding Gar-ment, fell down upon my Knees, and besought God, that in case such a thing were, he would vouchsafe me a good issue. And thereupon in the presence of God I made a vow, that if any thing through his grace should be revealed unto me, I would employ it neither to my own honour nor authority in the world, but to the spreading of his Name, and the service of my Neighbour. And with this vow, and good hope I departed out of my Cell with joy.
The Second Day.

I was hardly got out of my Cell into a Forrest, when me thought that the whole Heaven and all the Elements had already trimmed themselves against this Wedding. For even the Birds in my opinion, chanted more pleasantly then before, and the young Fawns skipped so merrily, that they rejoiced my old Heart, and moved me to sing: wherefore with a loud Voice I thus began:

With mirth thou pretty Bird rejoice, Thy Maker’s praise in-hanced.
Lift up thy thrill and pleasant Voice, Thy God is high advanced.
Thy food before he did provide,
And gives it in a fitting side,
Therewith be thou sufficed.

Why should’st thou now unpleasants be,
Thy wrath against God venting?
That he a little Bird made thee,
Thy silly head tormenting?
Because he made thee not a Man,
O peace, he hath well thought thereon.
Therewith be thou sufficed.

But
What is't I'd have poor earthly worm,
By God (as 'twere) inditing,
That I should thus'gainst Heaven storm
To force great arts by fighting?
God will out-braved be by none,
Who's good for naught, may hence be gone,
O' man b' herewith sufficed.
That he no Caesar hath thee from'd,
To pine therefore 'tis needless
His Name perhaps thou hadst defam'd Whereof he was not heedless.
Most clear and bright God's eyes do shine, He pierces to thy heart within,
And cannot be deceived.

This sang I now from the bottom of my Heart throughout the whole Forrest, so that it resounded from all parts, and the Hills repeated my last words, until at length I espeyed a curious green Heath, whither I betook my self out of the Forrest. Upon this Heath stood three lovely tall Cedars, which by rea-on of their breadth afforded an excellent and desired shade, whereat I greatly rejoiced; for although I had not hitherto gone far, yet my earnest longing made me very faint, whereupon I haste to the Trees to rest a little under them, but as soon as I came somewhat higher, I espied a Tablet fastned to one of them, on which (as afterwards I read) in curious Letters the following words were written:

Hospes salve: si quid tibi forsitam de nuptijs Regis auditum, Verba haec perpende. Quatuor viarum optionem per nos tibi Sponsus offert, per quas omnes, modo non in devias delabaris, ad Regiam ejus aulam pervenire possis. Prima brevis est, sed periculosa, et quae te in varios scopulos deducet, ex quibus vix te expedire licebit. Altera longior, quae circumducet te, non abducet, plana est et facilis, si te Magnetis auxilio neque ad dextoram trium trum, neque sinistrum ab-duci patiaris. Tertia vere Regia est, quae per varias Regis nostri delicias et spe\-c\-ula viam tibi reddet jucundam. Sed quod vix mille-mo haetenus obtigit. Per quartam nemini hominum licebit ad Regiam pervenire, ut-pote quae consumens et non nisi corporibus incorruptibilibus conveniens est. Elige nunc ex tribus quam velis, et in ea constans permane. Scito autem quamcunque ingressus fueris, ab immutabili fato tibi ita destinatum, nec nisi cum maximo vitae periculo regre-di fas esse. Hae sunt quae te scivisse voluimus; sed neus cave.
cave ignores, quanto cum periculo te huic viae commiseris, nam si te vel minimi delicti contra Regis nostri leges nostri obnoxium, quae so dum adhuc licet per eandem viam quam acceflisti domum te confer quam citiffime.

Now as soon as I had read this Writing, all my joy was near vanished again, and I who before Sang merrily, began now inwardly to Lament. For although I saw all the three ways before me, and understood that hence forward it was vouchsafed me, to make choice of one of them; yet it troubled me that in case I went the stony and rocky way, I might get a miserable and deadly fall, or taking the long one, I might wander out of it through by-ways, or be otherway's detained in the great Journey. Neither durst I hope, that I amongst thousands should be the very He, who should choose the Royal way. I saw likewise the Fourth before me, but it was so invironed with Fire and Exhalations, that I durst not (by much) draw near it, and therefore again and again considered, whether I should return back, or take any of the ways before me. I well weighed my own unworthiness, but the Dream still comforted me, that I was delivered out of the Tower, and yet I durst not confidently rely upon a Dream; whereupon I was so variously perplexed, that for very great weariness, hunger and thirst seised me, whereupon I presently drew out my Bread, cut a slice of it, which a snow-white Dove of whom I was not aware, sitting upon the Tree, espied and therewith (perhaps according to her wonted manner) came down, and betook her self very familiarly to me, to whom I willingly imparted my food, which she received, and so with her prettiness did again a little refresh me. But as soon as her enemy a most black Raven perceived it, he straights darted himself down upon the Dove, and taking no notice of me, would needs force away the Dove's meat, who could no otherwise guard her self but by flight; whereupon they both together flew toward the South, at which I was so hugely incensed and grieved, that that without thinking what I did, I made haste after the filthy Raven, and so against my will ran into one of the forementioned ways a whole Fields length; and thus the Raven being chased away, and the Dove delivered, I then first observed what I had inconsiderately done, and that I was already entred into a way, from which under peril of great punishment I durst not retire. And though I had still wherewith in some measure to comfort myself, yet that which was worst of all to me, was, that I had left my Bag and Bread at the Tree, and could never retrieve them: For as soon as I turned myself about, a contrary wind was so strong against me, that it was ready to fell me. But if I went forward on my way, I perceived no hinderance at all. From whence I could easily conclude, that it would cost me my life, in case I should set myself against the Wind; wherefore I patiently took up my cross, got upon my feet, and resolved, since so it must be, I would use my utmost endeavour to get to my Journeys end before night. Now although many apparent by-ways shewed themselves, yet I still proceeded with my Compass, and would not budge one step.
Step from the Meridian Line; howbeit the way was oftentimes so rugged and unpastable, that I was in no little doubt of it. On this way I constantly thought upon the Dove and Raven, and yet could not search out the meaning, until at length upon a high Hill afar of I espied a stately Portal, to which not regarding how far it was distant both from me and the way I was in, I hasted, because the Sun had already hid himself under the Hills, and I (by far) could elsewhere espy no abiding place, and this verily I ascribe only to God, who might well have permitted me to go forward in this way, and withheld my Eyes that so I might have gazed beside this Gate. To which (as was said) I now made mighty haste, and reached it by so much Daylight, as to take a very competent view of it. Now it was an exceeding Royal beautiful Portal, whereon were carved a multitude of most noble Figures and Devices, every one of which (as I afterwards learned) had its peculiar Signification; Above was fixed a pretty large Tablet, with these Words, Procul hinc, procul ite pro- fani, and other things more, that I was earnestly forbidden to relate. Now as soon as I was come under the Portal, there there straight stepped forth one in a Sky-coloured habit, whom I in friendly manner saluted, which though he thankfully returned, yet he instantly demanded of me my Letter of Invitation. O how glad was I that I had then brought it with me! For how easily might I have forgotten it (as it also chanced to others) as he himself told me? I quickly presented it, wherewith he was not only Satisfied, but (at which I much wondered) shewed me abundance of respect, saying, Come in my Brother, an acceptable Guest you are to me; and withal intreated me not to withhold my Name from him. Now having replied, that I was a Brother of the Red-Rosie Cross, he both wondered, and seemed to rejoice at it, and then proceeded thus, My Brother have you nothing about you wherewith to purchase a Token? I answered my ability was small, but if he saw any thing about me he had a mind to, it was at his service. Now he having request-ed of me my Bottle of Water, and I granted it, he gives me a golden Token qua Telfera. whereon stood no more but these two Letters, S. C. intreating me that when it stood me in good stead, I would rememremember him. After which I asked him, how many were got in before me, which he also told me, and lastly out of meer Friendship gave me a sealed Letter to the second Porter. Now having lingered some time with him, the Night grew on: Whereupon a great Beacon upon the Gate was immediately fired, that so if any were still upon the way, he might make haste thither. But the way where it finished at the Castle, was on both sides inclosed with Walls, and planted with all sorts of excellent Fruit-Trees, and still on every third Tree on each side Lanthorns were hung up, wherein all the Candles were already lighted with a glorious Torch by a beautiful Virgin, habited in Skye-colour, which was so noble and Majestick a Spectacle, that I yet delayed somewhat longer then was requisite. But at length after sufficient Information, and an advantageous Instruction, I friendly departed from the first Porter. On the way, though I would gladly have known what was written in my Letter, yet since I had no reason to mistrust the Porter, I forbore my purpose, and so went on the way, until I came likewise to the second Gate, which which although it was very like the other, yet was it adorned with Images & mystick significations. In the affixed Tablet stood Datæ & dabitur vobis. Under this Gate lay a terrible grim Lyon chain’d, who as soon as he espied me arose & made at me with great roaring: whereupon the second Porter who lay upon a Stone of Marble, awaked, and wished me not to be troubled or affrighted, and then drove back the Lion, and having received the Letter which I with trembling reached him, he read it, and with very great respect spake thus to me; Now well-come in Gods Name unto me the man whom of long time I would gladly have seen. Mean while he also drew out a token, and asked me whether I could purchase it? But I having nothing else left but my Salt, presented it to him, which he thankfully accepted. Upon this token again stood only two Letters namely, S. M. Being now just about to enter discourse with him, it began to ring in the Castle, whereupon the Porter counselled me to run apace, or else all the paines and labour I had hitherto taken would serve to no purpose, for the Lights above began already to be extinguished; whereupon upon I dispatched with such haste that I heeded not the Porter, in such anguish was I, and truly it was but necessary, for I could not run so fast but that the Virgin, after whom all the lights were put out, was at my heels, and I should never have found the way, had not she with her Torch afforded me some light; I was more-over constrained to enter the very next to her, and the Gate was so suddenly clapt to, that a part of my coate was locked out, which I verily was forced to leave behind me; for neither I, nor they who stood ready without and called at the Gate could prevail with the Porter to open it again, but he delivered the Keys to the Virgin, who took them with her into the Court. Mean time I again surveyed the Gate, which now appeared so rich, as the whole World could not equal it; just by the Door were two Columns, on one of them stood a pleasant Figure with this Inscription, Congratulor. The other having its Countenance vailed was sad, and beneath was written, Candoleo. In brief, the Inscriptions and Figures thereon, were so dark and mysterious, that the most dextrous man upon Earth could could not have expounded them. But all these (if God permit) I shall e'er long publish and explain. Under this Gate I was again to give my Name, which was this last time written down in a little Vellum-Book, and immediately with the rest dispatched to the Lord Bridegroom. Here it was where I first received the true Guest-token, which was somewhat less than the former, but yet much heavier, upon this stood these Letters S. P. N. Besides this, a new pair of Shoes were given me, for the Floor of the Castle was laid with pure shining Marble; my old Shoes I was to give away to one of the Poor (whom I would) who sate in throngs, howbeit in very good order, under the Gate. I then bestowed them on an old man: after which two Pages, with as many Torches, conducted me into a little Room; there they willed me to sit down on a Form, which I did, but they sticking their Torches in two holes, made in the Pavement, departed and left me, thus sitting alone. Soon after I heard a noise, but saw nothing, and it proved to be certain men who stumbled in upon me; but since I could see fee nothing, I was fain to suffer, and attend what they would do with me; but presently perceiving them to be Barbers, I intreated them not to jostle me so, for I was content to do whatever they desired, whereupon they quickly let me go, and so one of them (whom I could not yet see) fine and gently cut away the Hair round about from the Crown of my Head, but on my Forehead, Ears and Eyes he permitted my Ice-grey Locks to hang. In this first encounter (I must confess) I was ready to despair, for inasmuch as some of them shoved me so forceably, and I could yet see nothing, I could think no other but that God for my Curiosity had suffered me to miscarry. Now these invisible Barbers carefully gathered up the Hair which was cut off, and carried it away with them. After which the two Pages entred again, and heartily laughed at me for being so terrified. But they had scarce spoken a few Words with me, when again a little Bell began to ring; which (as the Pages informed me) was to give notice for assembling; whereupon they willed me to rise, and through many Walks, Doors and wind ing Stairs lighted me into a spacious Hall. In this Room was a great multitude of guests, Emperors, Kings, Princes, and Lords, Noble and Ignoble, Rich, and Poor, and all sorts of People, at which I hugely marveled, and thought to my self; ah, how gross a fool hast thou been to engage upon this Journey with so much bitterness and toil, when (behold) here are even those fellows whom thou well know'st, and yet hadst never any reason to esteem. They are now all here, and thou with all thy Prayers and Supplications art hardly got in at last. This and more the Devil at that time injected, whom I notwithstanding (as well as I could) directed to the issue. Mean time one or other of my acquaintance here and there spake to me: Oh Brother Rosencreutz! art thou here too; yea, (my Brethren) replied I, the Grace of God hath helped me in also; at which they raised a mighty laughter, looking upon it as ridiculous that there should be need of God in so flight an occasion. Now having demanded each of them concerning his way, and found that most were forced to clamber over the the Rocks, certain Trumpets (none of which we yet saw) began to sound to the Table, whereupon they all seated themselves, every one as he judged himself above the rest; so that for me and some other sorry Fellows there was hardly a little Nook left at the lowermost Table. Presently the two Pages entred, and one of them said Grace in so handsom and excellent a manner, as rejoiced the very Heart in my Body. Howbeit, certain great Srs John's made but little reckoning of them, but sneered and winked one at another, biting their Lips within their Hats, and using more the like unseemly Gestures. After this Meat was brought in, and albeit none could be seen, yet every thing was so orderly managed, that it seemed to mean as if every Guest had had his proper Attendant. Now my Artists having somewhat recruited themselves, and the Wine having a little removed shame from their Hearts, they presently began to vaunt and brag of their Abilities: One would prove this, another that, and commonly the most sorry Idiots made the loudest noise. Ah, when I call to mind what preternatural and and impossible enterprises: I then heard, I am still ready to vomit at it. In fine, they never kept in their order, but when ever one Rascal here, another there, could insinuate himself in between the Nobles; Then pretended they the finishing of such Adventures as neither Sampson, nor yet Hercules with all their strength could ever have achieved: This would discharge Atlas of his burden; The other would again draw forth the three-headed Cerberus out of Hell. In brief, every man had his own Prate, and yet the great Lords were so simple that they believed their pretences, and the Rogues so audacious, that although one or other of them were and there rapped over the Fingers with a Knife, yet they flinched or at it, but when any one perchance ad filched a Gold-Chain, then would I hazard for the like. I saw one who heard the rustling of the Heavens: The second could see Plato's Ideas: A third could number Democritus's Atoms. There were also not a few pretenders to the perpetual motion: Many in one (in my opinion) had good understanding, but assumed too much to himself, to his own destruction. Last-ly, there was one also who would needs out of hand persuade us that he saw the Servitors who attended, and would still have pursued his Contention; had not one of those invisible waiters reached him so Handsome a Cuff upon his lying Muzzle, that not only he, but many who were by him, became as mute as Mice. But it best of all pleased me, that all those, of whom I had any esteem, were very quiet in their business, and made no loud cry of it, but acknowledged themselves to be misunderstanding men, to whom the mysteries of Nature were too high, and they themselves much too small. In this Tumult I had almost cursed the day wherein I came hither; For I could not but with anguish behold that those Lewd Vain People were above at the Board, but I in so sorry a place could not, however rest in quiet, one of these Rascals scornfully reproaching me for a motley Fool. Now I thought not that there was yet one Gate behind, through which we must pass, but imagined I was during the whole Wedding, to continue in this scorn, contempt and indignity, which which yet I had at no time deserved, either of the Lord Bride-groom or the Bride; And therefore (in my opinion) we should have done well to have fought but some other Fool to his Wedding than me. Behold, to such impatience both the Iniquity of this World reduce ample hearts. But this really was one art of my Lameness, whereof (as is before mentioned) I dreamed. And truly this clamour the longer it lasted, the more it increased. For there were already those who boasted of false and imaginary Visions, and would persuade us of palpably lying Dreams. Now there sake by me a very fine quiet Man, who oftentimes discoursed of excellent matters, at length he said, behold my Brother, if any one should now me who were willing to instruct these Cockish People in the right way, would be heard? No, verily, replied I. The world, said he, is now resolved (whatever comes on it) to be cheated, and cannot abide to give Ear to those who intend as good. Seest thou also that same Cockscomb, with what whimsical Figures and polished Conceits he allures others to him. Here one makes Mouthes at the People with unheard of Mysterious Words. Yet believe me in this, the time is now coming when those shameful Wizards shall be plucked off, and all the World shall know what Vagabond Imposters were concealed behind them. Then perhaps that will be valued which at present is not esteemed. Whilst he was thus speaking, and the clamour the longer it lasted, the worse it was, all on a sudden there began in the Hall such excellent and stately Musick, as all the days of my Life I never heard the like; whereupon every one held his peace, and attended what would become of it: Now there were in this Musick all sorts of stringed Instruments imaginable, which sounded together in such harmony, that I forgot myself, and fate so unmovably, that those who fate by me were amazed at me, and this lasted near half an hour, wherein none of us spoke one word. For as soon as ever any one was about to open his Mouth, he got an unexpected blow, neither knew he from whence it came: Me thought since we were not permitted to see the Musicians, I should have been glad to view only all the Instruments they made use of.
After half an hour this Musick ceased unexpectedly, and we could neither see nor hear any thing further. Presently after, before the Door of the Hall began a great noise, sounding and beating of Trumpets, Shalsms and Kettle-Drums, also Master-like, as if the Emperor of Rome had been entering: whereupon the Door opened of itself, and then the noise of the Trumpets was so loud, that we were hardly able to indure it. Mean while (to my thinking) many thousand small Tapers came into the Hall, all which of themselves marched in so very exact an order as altogether amazed us, till at last the two fore mentioned Pages with bright Torches, lighting in a most beautiful Virgin, all drawn on a gloriously gilded Triumphant Self-moving Throne, entered the Hall. It seemed to me she was the very same who before on the way kindled, and put out the Lights, and that these her Attendants were the very same whom she formerly placed at the Trees. She was not now as before in Skye-colour, but arrayed in a snow-white glittering Robe, which sparkled of pure Gold.

and cast such a lustre that we durst not steadily behold it. Both the Pages were after the same manner habited (albeit somewhat more slightly; as soon as they were come into the middle of the Hall, & were descended from the Throne, all the small Tapers made obeisance before her: Whereupon we all stood up from our Benches, yet every one staid in his own place. Now she having to us, and we again to her, shewed all Respect and Reverence; in a most pleasant Tone she began thus to speak;

The King my Lord most gracious,
Who now's not very far from us.
As also his most lovely Bride,
To him in truth and honour tied;
Already, with great joy indulg'd,
Have your arrival hitherto view'd:
And do to every one, and all Promise their Grace in special;
And from their very Hearts desire,
You may it at the time acquire;
That so their future Nuptial joy
May mixed be with none's annoy.
Hereupon with all her small Tapers she again courteously bowed, and presently after began thus:

In th' Invitation writ, you know.
That no man called was hereto
Who of God's rarest gifts good store
Had not received long before,
Adorned with all requisit's,
As in such cases it befit's.
How though they cannot well conceive
That any man's so desperate, Under conditions so hard,
Here to intrude without regard;
Unlfs he have been first of all,
Prepared for this Nuptial;
And therefore in good hopes do dwell
That with all you it will be well:
Yet men are grown so bold, and rude,
Not weighing their ineptitude,
As still to thrust themselves in place Whereeto none of them called was:
No Cocks-comb here himself may sell,
No Rascal in with others steal;
For they resolve without all let A Wedding pure to celebrate.
So then the Artists for to weigh,
Scales shall be fix't th' ensuing day;

Whereby
Whereby each one may lightly find What he hath left at home behind.
If here be any of that Rout
Who have good cause themselves to doubt,
Let him pack quickly hence aside;
For that in case he longer hide,
Of grace forelor'n, and quite undone Betimes he must the Gantlet run:
If any now his Conscience gall,
He shall to night be left in th' Hall
And be again releas't by morn, Yet so he bither ne'er return.
If any man have confidence,
He with his waiter may go hence,
Who shall him to his Chamber light
Where he may rest in peace to night;
And there with praise await the Scale
Or else his Sleep may chance to faile.
The others here may take it well,
For who aim'sbove what's possible,
'Twere better much be hence had past,
But of you all we'll hope the best.

As soon as she had done speaking this, she again made reverence, and sprung cheerfully into her Throne, after which the Trumpets began again to sound, which yet was not of force to take from many their grievous Sighs.
So they again conducted her invisibly away, but the most part of the small Tapers remained in the Room, and still one of them accompanied each of us. In such perturbation 'tis not well possible to express what pensive Thoughts and Gestures were amongst us. Yet the most part resolved to await the Scale, and in case things sorted not well, to depart (as they hoped) in peace. I had soon cast up my reckoning, and being my Conscience convinced me of all ignorance, and unworthiness, I purposed to stay with the rest in the Hall, and chose much rather to content my self with the Meal I had already taken, than to run the Risk of a future repulse. Now after that every one by his small Taper had severally been conducted into a Chamber (each as I since understood into a peculiar one) There staid nine of us, and amongst the rest he also, who discoursed with me before at the Table. But although our small Tapers left us not, yet soon after within an hours time one of the fore-mentioned Pages came in, and bringing a great bundle of Cords with him, first demanded of us whether ther we had concluded to stay there, which when we had with Sighs affirmed, he bound each of us in a several place, and so went away with our small Tapers, and left us poor Wretches in Darkness. Then first began some to perceive the imminent danger, and I my self could not refrain Tears. For although we were not forbidden to speak, yet anguish and affliction suffered none of us to utter one word. For the Cords were so wonderfully made, yet none could cut them, muchless get them off his Feet: yet this comforted me, that still the future gain, of many an one, who had now betaken himself to rest, would prove very little to his satisfaction. But we by one only Nights Pennance might expiate all our presumption: till at length in my sorrowful thoughts I fell asleep; during which I had a Dream; Now although there be no great matter in it, yet I esteem it not impertient to recount it: Me thought I was upon an high Mountain, and saw before me a great & large Valley, in this Valley were gathered together an unspeakable multitude of People, each of which had at his Head Head a Thread, by which he was hanged up towards Heaven, now one hung high, another low, some stood even quite upon the Earth. But in the Air there flew up and down an ancient Man, who had in his hand a pair of Sheers, wherewith here he cut one's, and there another's thread. Now he that was nigh the Earth was so much the readier, & fall without noise, but when it happened to one of the high ones, he fell, so that the Earth quaked. To some it came to pass that their Thread was so stretched, that they came to the Earth before the Thread was cut. I took pleasure in this tumbling, and it joyed me at the Heart, when he who had over-exalted himself in the Air, of his Wedding, got so shameful a fall, that it carried even some of his Neighbours along with him. In like manner it also rejoiced me, that he who had all this while kept himself near the Earth, could come down so fine and gently, that even his next men perceived it not. But being now in my highest fit of Jollity, I was unawares jogged by one of my fellow Captives, upon which I was awaked, and was very much discontended.
contented with him; Howbeit, I considered my Dream, and recounted it to my Brother, who lay by me on the other side; who was not dissatisfied with it, but hoped some Comfort might thereby be pretended. In such discourse we spent the remaining part of the Night, and with longing expected the Day.

The Third Day.

Now as soon as the lovely day was broken, and the bright Sun, having raised himself above the Hills, had again betaken himself, in the high Heaven, to his appointed office, My good Champions began to rise out of their Beds, and leisurely to make themselves ready unto the Inquisition. Whereupon, one after another, they came again into the Hall, and giving us a good morrow, demanded how we had Slept to Night; and having espied our Bonds, there were some that reproved us for being so cowardly, and that we had not (much rather) as they, hazarded upon all adventures. Howbeit, some of them whose Hearts still Imote them made no loud cry of the business. We excused our selves with our ignorance, hoping we should now soon be set at Liberty, and learn why this disgrace? that they on the contrary had not yet altogether escaped, & perhaps their greatest danger was still to be expected: At length each one being again assembled, the Trumpets began now again to sound & the Kettle Drums to beat as formerly, and we then imagined no other but that the Bride-groom was ready to present himself; which nevertheless was a huge mistake. For it was again the yesterdays Virgin who had arrayed her self all in red Velvet, and girded her self with a white Scarfe. Upon her Head she had a green Wreath of Laurel, which hugely became her. Her train was now no more of small Tapers, but consisted of two hundred Men in Harnis, who were all (like her) cloathed in red and white. Now as soon as they were alighted from the Throne, she comesStraight to us Prisoners, and after she had Saluted us, she said in few words; That some of you you have been sensible of your wretched condition is hugely pleasing to my most mighty Lord, and he is also resolved you shall fare the better for it; And having espied me in my Habit, he laughed and spake, good lack! hast thou also submitted thy self to the Yoke, I imagined thou wouldst have made thy self very smug; with which Words she caused my Eyes to run over. After which she commanded we should be unbound, and cuppled together and placed in a station where we might well behold the Scales. For, said she, it may yet fare better with them, than with the Presumptious, who yet stands here at Liberty. Mean time the Scales which were entirely of Gold were hung up in the midst of the Hall; There was also a little Table covered with red Velvet, and seven weights placed thereon. First of all stood a pretty great one, next four little ones; lastly, two great ones severally; And these Weights in proportion to their bulk were so heavy, that no man can believe or comprehend it: But each of the Harried men had together with a naked Sword a strong rope; These she distributed according the number of Weights into seven ands, and out of every band chose one for their proper weight; and then gain sprung up into her high Throne, now as soon as she had made her reverence, with a very Shrill Tone she bean thus to speak:

Who into a Painter’s room does go and nothing does of painting know;
it does in prasing thereof, pride it;
shall be of all the World derided.

Who into th’ Artist’s order goes,
and thereunto was never chose;
it with pretence of skill does pride it;
shall be of all the World derided.

Who at a Wedding does appear;
yet was never intended there;
it does in coming highly pride it;
shall be of all the World derided.

Who now into this Scale ascends,
the weights not proving his fast Friends,
and that it bounces so does ride it;
shall be of all the World derided.

As soon as the Virgin had done speak-
made no scruple of, but first of all bowed himself a little towards the Virgin, and afterwards in all his state-ly Attire went up: where upon each Captain laid in his weight; which (to the wonder of all) he stood out. But the last was too heavy for him, so that forth he must; and that with such anguish that (as it seemed to me) the Virgin herself had pity on him, who also beckned to her people to hold their peace, yet was the good Emperor bound and delivered over to the Sixth band. Next him again came forth another Emperor, who stepped haughtily into the Scale, and having a great thick Book under his Gown, he imagined not to fail; but being scarce able to abide the third weight, and being unmercifully slung down, and his Book in that affrightment slipping from him, all the Soldiers began to laugh, and he was delivered up bound to the third band. Thus it went also with some others of the Emperors, who were all shamefully laughed at and captivated. After these comes forth a little short Man with a curlid brown Beard an Emperor too, who after the usual reverence got up also also, and held out so steadfastly, that me thought, had there been more weights ready, he would have out-stood them; To whom the Virgin immediately arose, and bowed before him, causing him to put on a Gown of red Velvet, and at last reached him a branch of Laurel, having good store of them upon her Throne, upon the steps whereof she willed him to sit down. Now how, after him it fared with the rest of the Emperors, Kings and Lords, would be too long to recount; but I cannot leave unmentioned that few of those great personages held out. Howbeit sundry eminent virtues (beyond my hopes) were found in many. One could stand out this, the second another, some two, some three, four or five, but few could attain to the just perfection; But every one who failed, was miserably laughed at by the bands. After the Inquisition had also passed over the Gentry, the learned, and unlearned, and the rest, and in each condition perhaps one, it may be, two, but for the most part none, was found perfect, it came at length to those honest Gentlemen the Vagabond Cheasers, and rascally Lapidem Spitalanficum makers, who were set upon the Scale with such scorn, that I my self for all my grief was ready to burst my Belly with laughing, neither could the very Prisoners themselves refrain. For the most part could not abide that severe trial, but with Whips and Scourges were jerked out of the Scale, and led to the other Prisoners, yet to a suitable band. Thus of so great a throng so few remained, that I am ashamed to discover their number. Howbeit there were Persons of quality also amongst them, who notwithstanding were (like the rest) honoured with Velvet Robes and wreaths of Laurel.

The Inquisition being compleatly finished, and none but we poor coupled hounds standing aside; At length one of the Captains stepped forth, and said, Gratious Madam, if it please your Ladyship let these poor men, who acknowledged their mis-understanding, be set upon the Scale also without their incurring any danger of penalty, and only for recreation's sake, if perchance any thing that is right may be found amongst... amongst them. In the first place I was in great perplexity, for in my anguish this was my only comfort, that I was not to stand in such ignominy, or to be lashed out of the Scale. For I nothing doubted but that many of the Prisoners wished that they had stay'd ten Nights with us in the Hall. Yet since the Virgin consented, so it must be, and we being unty'd were one after another set up: Now although the most part miscarried, yet they were neither laughed at, nor scourged, but peaceably placed on one side. My Companion was the fifth, who held out bravely, whereupon all, but especially the Captain who made the request for us, applauded him, and the Virgin shewed him the usual respect. After him again two more were dispatched, in an instant. But I was the eigh't; Now as soon as (with trembling) I stepped up, my Companion who alreadi sat by in his Velvet, looked friendly upon me, and the Virgin her self smiled a little. But for as much as I out-stayed all the Weights, the Virgin commanded them to draw me up by force, wherefore three men moreover hung on.
That's he.

the other side of the Beam, and yet could nothing prevail. Whereupon one of the Pages immediately stood up, and cried out exceeding loud, 'THAT's HE.' Upon which the other replyed, Then let him gain his Liberty, which the Virgin accorded; and being received with due Ceremonies, The choice was given me to release one of the Captives, whomsoever I pleased; Whereupon I made no long deliberation, but elected the first Emperor whom I had long pittied, who was immediately set free, and with all respect seated amongst us. Now the last being set up, and the Weights proving too heavy for him, in the mean while the Virgin espied my Roser, which I had taken out of my Hat into my Hands, and thereupon presently by her Page graciously requested them of me, which I readily sent her. And To this first Act was finished about ten in the forenoon. Whereupon the Trumpets began to sound again, which nevertheless we could not as yet see. Mean time the Bands were to step aside with their Prisoners, and expect the Judgment. After which a Council of the seven Seven Captains and us was set, and the business was propounded by the Virgin as President, who desired each one to give his opinion, how the Prisoners were to be dealt with. The first opinion was, That they should all be put to Death, yet one more severely than another: namely those who had presume nuously intruded themselves contrary to the Express conditions; others would have them kept close prisoners! Both which pleased neither the President, nor me. At length by one of the Emperors (the same whom I had freed) my Companion, and myself the affair was brought to this point; That first of all the principal Lords should with a befitting respect be led out of the Castle; others might be carried out somewhat more scornfully. These should be stripped, and caused to run out naked; The fourth with Rods, Whips, or Dogs, should be hunted out. Those who the day before willingly surrendered themselves, might be suffered to depart without any blame. And last of all those Presumptuous ones, and they who behaved themselves so insensibly at Dinner the day before, should be pun shed in Body and Life according to each Mans demerit. This opinion pleased the Virgin well, and obtained the upper hand. There was moreover another Dinner vouchsafed them, which they were soon acquainted with. But the Execution was deferred till twelve at noon, Herewith the Senate arose, and the Virgin also, together with her Attendants returned to her usual quarter. But the uppermost Table in the Room was allotted to us, they requesting us to take it in good part till the Business were fully dispatched. And then we should be conducted to the Lord Bridegroom and the Bride, with which we were at present well content. Mean time the Prisoners were again brought into the Hall, and each Man seated according to his Quality; they were likewise enjoyned to behave themselves somewhat more civilly than they had done the day before, which yet they needed not to have been admonished; for (without this, they had already put up their pipes. And this I can boldly say, not with flattery, but in the love of truth, that commonly those persons who were of the highest Rank, best understood how to behave themselves in so unexpected a misfortune. Their Treatment was but indifferent, yet with respect, neither could they yet see their Ascendants, but to us they were visible, whereat I was exceeding joyful. Now although Fourtune had exalted us, yet we took not upon us more than the rest, advising them to be of good Cheer, the event would not be so ill. Now although they would gladly have understood the Sentence of us, yet we were so deeply obliged that none durst open his Mouth about it. Nevertheless we comforted them as well as we could, drinking with them to try if the Wine might make them any thing cheerfuller.

Our Table was covered with red V. l. -Exaltation-; beset with drinking-Cups of pure Silver and Gold; which the rest could not behold without amazement and very great anguish. But ere we had feated our selves, in came the two Pages, presenting every one in the Bridegroom's behalf, the Gold n Fleece with a flying Lyon, requesting us to wear them at the Table, and as became us, to observe the Reputation and Dignity of the Order, which his Majesty had now vouch-vouchsafed us, and should suddenly be ratified with suitable Ceremonies. This we received with profoundest submission, promising obediently to perform whatsoever his Majesty should please. Besides these, the noble Page had a Schedule, wherein we were set down in order. And for my part I should not otherwise be desirous to conceal my place, if perchance it might not be interpreted to Pride in me, which yet is expressly against the fourth Weight. Now because our entertainment was exceeding stately, we demanded one of the Pages, whether we might not have leave to send some choice bit to our Friends and Acquaintance, who making no difficulty of it, every one sent plentifully to his acquaintance by the waiters, howbeit they saw none of them; and forasmuch as they knew not whence it came, I was my self desirous to carry somewhat to one of them, but as soon as I was risen, one of the Waiters was presently at my Elbow, saying, He desired me to take friendly marking, for in case one of the Pages had seen it, it would have come to the King's Ear, who would certainly have taken it amiss.
amiss of me; but since none had observed it but himself, he purposed not to betray me, but that I ought for the time to come to have better regard to the dignity of the order: With which words the Servant did really to astonish me, that for a long time after I scarce moved upon my Seat, yet I returned him Thanks for his faithful warning, as well as in haste and affrightment I was able. Soon after the Drums began to beat again, to which we were already accustomed: For we well knew it was the Virgin, wherefore we prepared our selves to receive her, who was now coming in with her usual Train, upon her high Seat, one of the Pages bearing before her a very tall Goblet of Gold. And the other, a Patent in Parchment: Being now after a marvellous artificial manner alighted from the Seat, she takes the Goblet from the Page, and presents the same in the King's behalf, saying, That it was brought us from his Majesty, and that in honour of him we should cause it to go round. Upon the cover of this Goblet stood Fortune curiously cast in Gold, who had in her Hand a red flying Ensign, for which cause cause I drunk somewhat the more sadly, as having been but too well acquainted with Fortune’s way-wardness. But the Virgin as well as we, was adorned with the Golden Fleece and Lyon, whence I observed, that perhaps she was the president of the Order. Wherefore we demanded of her how the Order might be named? She answered, that it was not yet reasonable to discover it, till the affair with the Prisoners were dispatched. And therefore their Eyes were still held; and what had hitherto happened to us, was to them only for an Offence and Scandal, although it were to be accounted as nothing, in regard of the honour that attended us. Hereupon she began to distinguish the Patent which the other Page held into two different parts, out of which about thus much was read before the first company.

That they should confess that they had too lightly given Credit to false fictitious Books, had assumed too much to themselves, and so came into this Castle, albeit they were never invited into it, and perhaps the most part had presented themselves with design to make their Markets here, and and afterwards to live in the greater Pride and Lordliness; And thus one had seduced another, and plunged him into this disgrace and ignominy, wherefore they were deservedly to be soundly punished.

Which they with great humility readily acknowledged, and gave their Hands upon it. After which a severe check was given to the rest, much to this purpose.

That they very well knew, and were in their Consciences convinced, that they had forged false fictitious Books, had befooled others, and cheated them, and thereby had diminished Regal dignity amongst all. They knew in like manner what ungodly deceitful Figures they had made use of, in so much as they spared not even the Divine Trinity, but accustomed themselves to cheat People all the Country over. It was also now as clear as Day with what Practices they had indeavoured to ensnare the true Guests, and introduce the Ignorant: in like manner, that it was manifest to all the World, that they wallowed in open Whoredom, Adultery, Gluttony, and other Unleannesses: All which was against the express Orders of our Kingdom. In brief, they knew they had disparaged Kingly Majesty, jeasy, even amongst the common sort, and therefore they should confess themselves to be manifest convicted Vagabond-Cheaters, Knaves and Rascals, whereby they deserved to be cashiered from the company of civil People, and severely to be punished. The good Artists were loath to come to this Confession, but inasmuch as not only the Virgin herself threatened, and sware their death; but the other party also vehemently raged at them, and unanimously cryed out, that they had most wickedly seduced them out of the Light: They at length, to prevent a huge misfortune, confessed the same with dolour, and yet withal alleged that what had herein happened was not to be animadverted upon them in the worst sense. For in as much as the Lords were absolutely resolved to get into the Castle, and had promised great sums of Money to that effect, each one had used all Craft to seize upon something, and so things were brought to that pass, as was now manifest before their Eyes. But that it succeeded not, "They in their opinion had dis-deserved no more than the Lords themselves;" As "who should have had so much understanding as to consider that in case any one had been sure of getting in, he would not, in so great Peril, for the sake of a flight again, have clambered over the Wall with them. Their looks also told so mightily, that whoever had no other mean to maintain himself, was fain to ingage in such a hazardous. They hoped moreover, if a right Judgment were made, y should be found no way to have caried, as having behaved them- selves towards the Lords, as became vants, upon their earnest entreaty. answer was made them, that his Refutation Royal Majesty had determined to pun all, and every man, albeit one were severely than another. For al- though what had been allledged by m was partly true, and therefore the ds should not wholly be indulged, yet y had good reason to prepare them- selves for Death, who had so presump- tully obtruded themselves, and per- seduced the more ignorant against ir will; As likewise they who with Books had violated Royal Majesty, the same might be evinced out of in very Writings and Books.
Hereupon many began most pitifully to lament, cry, weep, intreat, and prostrate themselves, all which notwithstanding could avail them nothing, and I much marvelled how the Virgin could be so resolute, when yet their misery caused our Eyes to run over, and moved our Compassion (although the most part of them had procured us much trouble, and vexation) For the presently dispatched her Page, who brought with him all the Curiaffiers which had this day been appointed at the Scales, who were commanded each of them to take his own to him, and in an orderly Procession, so as still each Curiaflier should go with one of the Prisoners, to conduct them into her great Garden. At which time each one so exactly recognised his own Man, that I marvelled at it. Leave also was likewise given to my yesterday Companions to go out into the Garden unbound, and to be present at the Execution of the Sentence. Now as soon as every Man was come forth, the Virgin mounted up into her High Throne, requesting us to sit down upon the Steps, and to appear at the Judgment, which we refused not not, but left all standing upon the Table (except the Goblet, which the Virgin committed to the Pages keeping) and went forth in our Robes upon the Throne, which of it self moved so gently as if we had passed in the Air, till in this manner we came into the Garden, where we arose altogether. This Garden was not extraordinary curious, only it pleased me that the Trees were planted in so good order. Besides there ran in it a most costly Fountain, adorned with wonderful Figures and Inscriptions, and strange Characters, (which God willing I shall mention in a future Book) In this Garden was raised a wooden Scaffold, hung about with curiously painted figured Coverlets. Now there were four Galleries made one over another, the first was more glorious than any of the rest, and therefore covered with a white-Taffata Curtain, so that at that time we could not perceive who was behind it. The second was empty and uncovered. Again the two last were covered with red and blew Taffata. Now as soon as we were come to the Scaffold, the Virgin bowed herself down to the ground, at which we were were mightily terrified: For we might easily guess that the King and Queen must not be far off; Now we also having duly performed our Reverence, The Virgin lead us up by the winding Stairs into the second Gallery, where she placed her self uppermost, and us in our former order. But how the Emperor whom I had released, behaved himself towards me, both at this time, as also before at the Table, I cannot, without slander of wicked Tongues, well relate. For he might well imagine in what Anguish and Sollicitude he now should have been, in case he were at present to attend the Judgment with such ignominy, and that only through me he had now attained such Dignity and Worthinesse. Mean time the Virgin who first of all brought me the Invitation, and whom hitherto I had never since seen, stepped in; First she gave one blast upon her Trumpet, and then with a very loud Voice declared the Sentence in this manner.

Orationem judicandos. The Kings Majesty my most gracious Lord could from his heart wish, that all and every one here Assembled, had upon his his Majesties Invitation presented themselves so qualified, as that they might (to his honour) with greatest frequency have adorned this his appointed Nuptial and joy-ful Feast. But since it hath otherwise pleased Almighty God, his Majesty hath not whereat to murmur, but must be forced, contrary to his own Inclination, to abide by the ancient and laudable Constitutions of this Kingdom. But now, that his Majesty's innate Clemency may be celebrated over all the World, he hath thus far absolutely dealt with his Council and Estates, that the usual Sentence shall be considerably lenified. So that in the first place he is willing to vouchsafe to the Lords and Poten-tates, not only their lives intirely, but also freely and frankly to dismiss them; friendly and courteously intreating your Lordships not at all to take it in evil part that you cannot be present at his Majesties Feast of Honour; But to remember that there is notwithstanding more imposed up-on you: Lordships by God Almighty (who in the distribution of his Gifts hath an incomprehensible Consideration) than you can duly and easily sustain. Neither is your Reputation hereby prejudiced, although you be rejected by this our Order, since we cannot at once all of us, do all things. But for as much as your Lordships have been seduced by base Rascals, it shall not on their part, pass unrevenged. And furthermore his Majesty resolveth shortly to communicate with your Lordships a Catalogue of Heretics or index Expurgatorius, that you may henceforward be able with better judgment to discern between the Good and the Evil. And because his Majesty e're long also purposeth to rummage his Library, and offer up the seductive Writings to Vulcan, he friendly, humbly, and courteously intreat every one of your Lordships to put the same in Execution with your own, whereby it is to be hoped that all evil and Mischief may for the time to come be remedied. And you are withal to be admonished, never henceforth so inconsiderately to covet an entrance hither, least the former excuse of Seducers be taken from you, and you fall into Disgrace and Contempt with all Men. In fine, for as much as the Estates of the Land have still somewhat to demand of your Lordships, his Majesty hopes that no Man will think much to redeem himself with a Chain or what else be hath about him, and so in friendly manner to depart from us, and through our safe conduct to betake himself home again. The
The others who stood not, at the first, third, and fourth weight, his Majesty will not so lightly dismiss. But that they also may now experience his Majesty's gentleness, it is his Command, to strip them stark naked, and so send them forth.

Those who in the second and fifth weight were found too light, shall besides Stripping, be noted with one, two or more Brandmarks, according as each one was lighter, or heavier.

They who were drawn up by the sixth or seventh, and not by the rest, shall be somewhat more gratiously dealt withal, and so forward. For unto every combination there was a certain punishment ordained, which were here too long to recount.

They who yesterday separated themselves freely of their own accord, shall go out at Liberty without any blame.

Finally, the convicted vagabond-Cheat ters who could move up none of the weights, shall as occasion serves, be punished in Body and Life, with the Sword, Halter, Water and Rods. And such Execution of Judgment shall be inviolably observed for an Example unto others.
Herewith our Virgin broke her Wand, and the other who read the Sentence, blewed her Trumpet, and stepped with most profound Reverence towards those who stood behind the Curtain. But here I cannot omit to discover somewhat to the Reader concerning the number of our Prisoners; of whom those who weighed one, were seven; those who weighed two, were twenty one; they who three, thirty five; they who four, thirty five; those who five, twenty one; those who six, seven; but he that came to the seventh, and yet could not well raise it, He, was only one, and indeed the same whom I released. Besides, of them who wholly failed there were many: But of those who drew all the weights from the ground, but few. And these as they stood severally before us, so I diligently numbered, and noted them down in my Table-Book; And it is very admirable that amongst all those who weighed any thing, none was equal to another. For although amongst those who weighed three, there were thirty five, yet one of them weighed the first, second, and third, another the third, fourth, and fifth, a third, the fifth, sixth, sixth, and seventh and so on: It is likewise very wonderful that amongst one hundred twenty six who weighed any thing, none was equal to another; And I would very willingly name them all, with each Mans weight, were it not as yet forbidden me. But I hope it may hereafter be published with the Interpretation.

Now this Judgment being read over, the Lords in the first place were well satisfied, because in such severity they durst not look for a mild sentence. For which cause they gave more than they were desired, and each one redeemed himself with Chains, Jewels, Gold, Monies and other things, as much as they had about them; and with reverence took leave. Now although the King's Servants were forbidden to fear any at his going away, yet some unlucky Birds could not hold laughing, and certainly it was sufficiently ridiculous to see them pack away with such speed, without once looking behind them. Some desired that the promised Catalogue might with the first be dispatched after them, and then they would take such order with their Books as should be pleasing to his Majesty; which was again assured. At the Door was given to each of them out of a Cup a Draught of FORGETFULNESS, that so he might have no further memory of misfortune.

After these the Voluntiers departed, who because of their ingenuity were suffered to pass, but yet so as never to return again in the same fashion; but if to them (as likewise to the others) any thing further were revealed, then they should be well-come Guests.

Mean while others were stripping, in which also an inequality (according to each man's demerit) was observ'd. Some were sent away naked, without other hurt. Others were driven out with small Bells. Some were scourged forth. In brief the punishments were so various, that I am not able to recount them all. In the end it came to the last also with whom somewhat a longer time was spent, for whilst some were hanging, some beheading, some forced to leap into the Water, and the rest otherwise dispatching, much time was consumed. Verily at this execution my Eyes ran over, not indeed in regard of the the punishment, which they otherwise for their impudency well deserved, but in contemplation of humane blindness, in that we are continually build-ing our selves in that which ever since the first Fall hath been hitherto Sealed up to us. Thus the Garden which so lately was quite full, was soon emptied; so that besides the Souldiers there was not a man left. Now as soon as this was done, and silence had been kept for the space of five minut's; There came forward a beautiful snow-white Unicorn with a golden coller (having in it certain Letters) about his neck: In the same place he bowed himself down upon both his fore-feet, as if hereby he had shewn honour to the Lyon, who stood so immovable upon the fountain, that I took him to be of stone or brass, who immediately took the naked Sword which he bare in his Paw, and brake it in the middle in two, the pieces whereof to my thinking sunk into the Fountain: after which he so long roared, until a white-Dove brought a branch of Olive in her bill, which the Lyon devoured in an instant, and so was quieted. And so the Unicorn returned to
to his place with joy. Hereupon our Virgin lead us down again by the winding stairs from the Scaffold, and so we again made our reverence towards the Curtain. We were to wash our hands and heads in the Fountain, and there a little while to wait in our order, till the King through a certain secret Gallery were again returned into his Hall; and then we also with choice Music, Pomp, State and pleasant discourse were conducted into our former lodging: And this was done about four in the afternoon. But that in the meanwhile the time might not seem too long to us, the Virgin bestowed on each of us a noble Page, who were not only richly habited, but also exceeding learned, so that they could so aptly discourse upon all subjects, that we had good reason to be ashamed of our selves. These were commanded to lead us up and down the Castle (yet but into certain places) and if possible, to shorten the time according to our desire. Mean time the Virgin took leave with this consolation, that at Supper she would be with us again, and after that celebrate the Ceremonies of the hanging up of of the Weights, requesting that we would in patience waite till the next day, for on the morrow we must be presented to the King. She being thus departed from us, each of us did what best pleased him. One part viewed the excellent paintings, which they copied out for themselves, and considered also what the wonderful Characters might signify. Others were fain to recruit themselves again with meat and drink. I indeed caused my Page to conduct me (together with my Companion) up and down the Castle, of which walk it will never repent me as long as I have a day to live. For besides many other glorious Antiquities, the Royal Sepulcher was also shewed me, by which I learned more than is extant in all Books. There in the same place stands also the glorious Phanix (of which two years since I published a particular small discourse) And am resolved (in case this my narration shall prove useful) to set forth several and peculiar Treatises, concerning the Lyon, Eagle, Griffon, Falcon and other like, together with their Draughts and Inscriptions. It grieves me me also for my other Consorts, that they neglected such preterious Treasures.
And yet I cannot but think it was the special will of God it should be so. I indeed reaped the most benefit by my Page, for according as each ones genius lay, so he led his intrusted into the quarters and places which were pleasing to him. Now the Kyes hereunto belonging were committed to my Page, and therefore this good Fortune hapned to me before the rest; For although he invited others to come in, yet they imagining such Tombs to be only in the Church-yard, thought they should well enough get thither, when ever any thing was to be seen there. Neither shall these Monuments (as both of us copied and transcribed them) be withheld from my thankful Schollars. The other thing that was shewed us two was the Noble Library as it was altogether before the Reformation. Of which (albeit it rejoices my Heart as often as I call it to mind) I have so much the less to say, because the Catalogue thereof is very shortly to be published. At the entry of this Room stands a great Book, the like whereof I never saw, in which all the Figures, Rooms, Portals, tals; also all the Writings, Riddles and the like, to be seen in the whole Castle, are delineated. Now although we have made some promise concerning this also, yet at present I must contain my self, and first learn to know the World better. In every Book stands its Author painted; whereof (as I understood) many were to be burnt, that so even their memory may be blotted out from amongst the Righteous. Now having taken a full view hereof, and being scarce gotten forth, another Page came running to us, and having whispered somewhat in our Pages ear, he delivered up the Keys to him, who immediately carried them up the winding Stairs; But our Page was very much out of Countenance, and we setting hard upon him with Intreaties, He declared to us that the King's Majesty would by no means permit that either of the two, namely the Library and Sepulchers, should be seen by any Man and therefore he besought us as we tendered his Life, to discover it to no Man, he having already utterly denied it: Whereupon both of us stood hovering between Joy and Fear, yet it continued in silence, and no Man made further inquiry about it. Thus in both places places we consumed three hours; which does not at all repent me. Now although it had already strucken Seven, yet nothing was hitherto given us to eat, howbeit our hunger was easie to be abated by constant Revivings, and I could be well content to fast all my Life long with such Entertainment. About this time the Curious Fountains, Mines, and all kind of Art-Shops, were also shown us, of which there was none but surpased all our Arts, though they should all be melted into one Mass. All their Chambers were built in semi-circle, that so they might have before their Eyes the costly Clock-work which was erected upon a fair Turret in the Center, and regulate themselves according to the course of the Planets, which were to be seen on it in a glorious manner. And hence I could easily conjecture wherein our Artists failed, howbeit its none of my duty to inform them. At length I came into a spacious Room (shown indeed to the rest a great while before) in the middle whereof stood a terestrial Globe, whose Diameter contained thirty Foot, albeit near half of it, except a little which was covered with the steps. was was let into the Earth. Two Men might readily turn this Globe about with all its Furniture, so that more of it was never to be seen, but so much as was above the Horizon. Now although I could easily conceive that this was of some special use, yet could I not understand where to those Ringlets of Gold (which were upon it in several places) served; At which my Page laughed, and advised me to view them more narrowly. In brief, I found there my native Country noted with Gold also: Whereupon my Companion fought his, and found that so too. Now for as much as the same happened in like manner to the rest who stood by, The Page told us of a certain that it was yesterday declared to the King's Majesty by their old Atlas (so is the Astronomer named) that all the gilded points did exactly answer to their native Countries, according as had been shown of each of them. And therefore He also, as soon as he perceived that I undervalued my self, and that nevertheless there stood a point upon my native Country, moved one of the Captains to intreat for us, that we should be set upon the Scale (without our Peril).
ril) at all Adventures; Especially seeing one of our Native Countries had a notable good Mark: And truly it was not without cause that He, the Page who had the greatest power of all the rest, was bestowed on me. For this I then returned him thanks, and immediately looked more diligently upon my native Country, and found more over that besides the Ringlet, there were also certain delicate streaks upon it, which nevertheless I would not be thought to speak to my own praise or glory. I saw much more too upon this Globe than I am willing to discover. Let each Man take into consideration why every City produceth not a Philosopher. After this he lead us quite into the Globe, which was thus made; On the Sea(there being a large square besides it) was a Tablet, whereon stood three Dedications, and the Author's name, which a Man might gently lift up and by a little joyned Board, go into the Center, which was capable of four Persons, being nothing but a round Board whereon we could sit and at ease by broad-daylight (it was now already dark) contemplate the Stars, to my thinking they they were mere carbuncles which glit-tered in an agreeable order, and moved so gallantly, that I had scarce any mind ever to go out again, as the Page afterwards told the Virgin, with which she often twitted me: For it was already Supper time, and I had so much amused my self in the Globe, that I was almost the last at Table; wherefore I made no longer delay, but having again put on my gown (which I had before laid aside) and stepping to the Table, the waiters treated me with so much reverence and honour, that for shame I durst not look up, and so unawares permitted the Virgin, who attended me on one side, to stand, which she soon perceiving twitched me by the gown, and so led me to the table to speak any further concerning the Musick, or the rest of that magnificent entertainment, I hold it needless both because it is not possible sufficiently to express it, and I have above reported it according to my power. In brief, there was nothing there but Art and A-menity. Now after we had each to other related our employment since noon (howbeit, not a word was spoken of the Library and Monuments) being already merry with the Wine, the Virgin began thus: My Lords, I have a great contention with one of my Sisters: In our Chamber we have an Eagle; Now we cherish him with such diligence, that each of us is dissirous to be the best beloved, and upon that score have many a Squabble. On a day we concluded to go both together to him, and toward whom he should shew himself most friendly, hers should he properly be; this we did, and I (as commonly) bare in my hand a branch of Lawrel; but my Sister had none. Now as soon as he espied us both, he immediately gave my Sister another branch which he had in his Beak, and offered at mine, which I gave him. Now each of us hereupon imagined her self to be best beloved of him; which way am I to resolve my self? This modest proposal of the Virgin pleased us all mighty well, and each one would gladly have heard the Solution, but in as much as they all looked upon me, and desired to have the beginning from from me, my mind was so extremly confounded that I knew not what else to do with it but propound another in its stead, and therefore said Gracious Lady, your Ladyships question were easily to be resolved if one thing did not perplex me. I had two Companions, both which loved me exceedingly;
now they being doubtful which of them was most dear to me, concluded to run to me unawares, and that he whom I should then embrace should be the right; this they did, yet one of them could not keep pace with the other, so he staid behind and wept, the other I embraced with amazement. Now when they had afterwards discovered the business to me; I knew not how to resolve myself, and have hitherto let it rest in this manner, until I may find some good advice herein. The Virgin wondered at it; and well observed where about I was, whereupon she replied, well then let us both be quit; and then desired the solution from the rest. But I had already made them wise. Wherefore the next began thus.
In the City where I live, a Virgin was lately condemned to death, but the Judge
Judge being something pittiful towards her, caused it to be proclaimed that if any Man desired to become the Virgins Champion, he should have free leave to do it. Now she had two Lovers, the one presently made himself ready, and came into the lists to expect his adversary, afterwards the other also presented himself, but coming somewhat too late, he resolved nevertheless to fight, and willingly suffer himself to be vanquished, that so the Virgin's life might be preserved, which also succeeded according. Whereupon each challenged her: Now my Lords instruct me, to which of them of right belongeth she? The Virgin could hold no longer, but said, I thought to have gained much information, and am my self gotten into the Net, but yet would gladly hear whether there be any more behind; yes, that there is, answered the third, a Stranger adventure hath not been yet recounted then that which happened to my self. In my Youth I loved a worthy Maid: Now that this my love might attain its wished end, I was fain to make use of an ancient Matron, who easily brought me to her. Now it it happened that the Maid's Brethren came in upon us just as we three were together, who were in such a rage that they would have taken my Life, but upon my vehement Supplication, they at length forced me to swear to take each of them for a Year, to my wedded Wife. Now tell me my Lords, should I take the old, or the young one first? We all laughed sufficiently at this riddle, and though some of them muttered one to another thereupon, yet none would undertake to unfold it. Hereupon the fourth began. In a certain City there dwelt an honourable Lady, who was beloved of all, but especially by a young noble Man, who would needs be too importunate with her; at length she gave him this determination, that in case he would, in a cold Winter, lead her into a fair green Garden of Roses, then he should obtain, but if not, he must resolve never to see her more. The noble Man travelled into all Countries to find such a Man as might perform this, till at length he lite upon a little old Man that promised to do it for him, in case he would assure him of half his Estate; which he having consented to, the the other was as good as his word. Whereupon he invited the foresaid Lady home to his Garden, where contrary to her expectation she found all things green, pleasant and warm, and withal remembering her promise, she only requested that she might once more return to her Lord, to whom with Sighs and Tears she bewailed her lamentable condition: But for as much as he sufficiently perceived her faithfulness, he dispatched her back to her Lover, who had so dearly purchased her, that she might give him Satisfaction. This Husband's integrity did so mightily affect the noble man, that he thought it a sin to touch so honest a Wife; so he sent her home again with honour to her Lord. Now the little Man perceiving such Faith in both these, would not, how poor soever he were, be the least, but restored the noble Man all his Goods again, and went his way. Now (my Lords) I know not which of these persons may have shown the greatest ingenuity? Here our Tongues were quite cut off. Neither would the Virgin make any other reply, but only that another should go on. Wherefore fore the fifth, without delay, began. My Lords, I desire not to make long work; who hath the greater joy, he that beholdeth what he loveth, or he that only thinketh on it? He that beholdeth it, said the Virgin; nay answered I; hereupon arose a contest, wherefore the sixth called out, My Lords I am to take a Wife; now I have before me a maid, a married Wife, and a Widdow; ease me of this doubt, and I will afterwards help to order the rest. It goes well there, replied the seventh, where a man hath his choice, but with me the case is otherwise; in my youth I loved a fair and vertuous Virgin from the bottom of my Heart, and she me in like manner: howbeit because of her Friends denial we could not come together in wedlock: Whereupon she was married to another, yet an honest and discreet Person, who maintained her honourably and with affection, until she came into the paines of Child-birth, which went so hard with her that all thought she had been dead, so with much state, and great mourning she was interred. Now I thought with my self, during her her Life thou could'st have no part in this Woman, but yet now dead as she is thou may'st embrace and kiss her sufficiently; whereupon I took my Servant with me, who dug her up by Night; Now having opened the Coffin and locked her in my Arms, and feeling about her Heart, I found still some little motion in it, which increased more and more from my warmth, till at last I perceived that she was indeed still alive; wherefore I quietly bare her home; and after I had warmed her chilled Body with a costly Bath of Herbs, I committed her to my Mother until she brought forth a fair Son, whom (as the Mother) I caused faithfully to be nursed. After two days (she being then in a mighty amazement) I discovered to her all the forepast affair, requesting her that for the time to come she would live with me as a Wife, against which she thus excepted, in case it should be grievous to her Husband who had well and honourably maintained her. But if it could otherwise be, she was the present obliged in love to one as well as the other. Now after two Months (being then to make a Journey elsewhere) elsewhere) I invited her Husband as a Guest, and amongst other things demanded of him, whether if his deceased Wife should come home again, he could be content to receive her, and he affirming it with Tears and Lamentations, at length I brought him his Wife together with his Son, and an account of all the fore-passed business, intreating him to ratifie with his consent my fore-purposed espousals. After a long dispute he could not beat me from my right, but was fain to leave me the Wife. But still the contest was about the Son. Here the Virgin interrupted him, and said, It makes me wonder how you could double the afflicted Man's grief. How, answered he, was I not then concerned? Upon this there arose a dispute amongst us, yet the most part affirmed that he had done but right. Nay, said he, I freely returned him both his Wife and Son. Now tell me (my Lords) was my honesty, or this Man's joy the greater? These words had so mightily cheared the Virgin that (as if it had been for the sake of these two) she caused a health to go round. After which the rest of the proposals went went on somewhat perplexedly, so that I could not retain them all, yet this comes to my mind, that one said, that a few years before he had seen a Physician, who bought a parcel of Wood against Winter, with which he warmed himself all Winter long; but as soon as the Spring returned he sold the very same Wood again, and so had the use of it for nothing; Here must needs be skill, said the Virgin, but the time is now past. Yea, replied my Companion, who ever understands not how to resolve all the Riddles, may give each Man notice of it by a proper Messenger, I conceive he will not be denied. At this time they began to say Grace, and we arose altogether from the Table, rather satisfied and merry than glutted; and it were to be wished that all Invitations and Feastings were thus to be kept. Having now taken some few turns up and down the Hall again, the Virgin asked us whether we desired to begin the Wedding. Yes, said one, noble and virtuous Lady; whereupon she privately dispatched a Page, and yet in the meantime proceeded in discourse with us. In brief. brief she was already become so familiar with us, that I ventured and requested her Name. The Virgin smiled at my Curiosity, but yet was not moved, but replied, "My Name contains five and fifty, and yet hath only eight Letters, the third is the third part of the fifth, which added to the sixth will produce a Number, whose root shall exceed the third itself by just the first, and it is the half of the fourth. 'Now the fifth and the seventh are equal, the last and the first are also equal, and make with the second as much as the sixth hath, which contains just four more than the third triple. Now tell me, my Lord, how am I called? The answer was intricate enough to me, yet I left not off so, but said, noble and virtuous Lady, may I not obtain one only Letter? Yea (said she) that may well be done. What then (replied I again) may the seventh contain? It contains as many as there are Lords here. With this I was content, and easily found her Name, at which she was well pleased, with assurance that much more should yet be revealed to us. Mean time certain Virgins had made themselves ready, and came in with great Cere-
2. Juvenum. Ceremony. First of all two Youths carried Lights before them, one of them was of a jocond Countenance, sprightly Eyes and gentile Proportion. The other lookt something angrily, whatever he would have, must be, as I afterwards perceived. After them first followed four Virgins; one looked shame-facedly towards the Earth, very humble in Behaviour; The second also was a modest, bashful Virgin; The third, as she entered the Room seemed amazed at somewhat, and as I understood, she cannot well abide where there is too much Mirth. The fourth brought with her certain small wreahts, thereby to manifest her Kindness and Liberality. After these four came two which were somewhat more gloriously Apparelled; they saluted us courteously; One of them had a Gown of Skye coulour spangled with golden Stars; The others was green, beautified with red and white stripes. On their Heads they had thin flying Tiffatinis, which did most becomingly adorn them. At last came one alone, who had on her head a Coronet, but rather looked up towards Heaven, than towards Earth.
Earth. We all thought it had been the Bride, but were much mistaken, though otherwise in Honour, Riches and State she much surpassed the Bride; and she afterwards ruled the whole Wedding. Now on this occasion we all followed our Virgin, and fell down on our Knees, howbeit she shewed her self extremly humble, offering every one her hand, and admonishing us not to be too much surprized at this, for this was one of her smallest Bounties, but to lift up our Eyes to our Creator, and learn hereby to acknowledge his Omnipotency, and so proceed in our enterprised course, employing this Grace to the praise of God, and the good of Man. In sum, her words were quite different from those of our Virgin, who was somewhat more worldly. They pierced even through my Bones and Marrow. And thou, said she further to us, hast received more than others, see that thou also make a larger return. This to me was a very strange Sermon; for as soon as we saw the Virgins with the stick, we imagioned we must presently fall to Dancing, but that time was not as yet come. Now the Weights, whereof whereof mention hath been before made, stood still in the same place, wherefore the Queen (I yet knew not who she was) commanded each Virgin to take up one, but to our Virgin she gave her own, which was the last and greatest, and commanded us to follow behind; our Majesty was then somewhat abated, for I well observed that our Virgin was but too good for us, & that we were not to highly reputed as we ourselves were almost in part willing to phantastic. So we went behind in our order, and were brought into the first Chamber, where our Virgin in the first place hang up the Queen's weight, during which an excellent Spiritual Hymn was Sung; there was nothing costly in this Room save only certain curious little Prayer Books which should never be missing. In the midst was erected a Pulpit, very convenient for Prayer, where in the Queen kneeled down, about her we were all fain to kneel and pray after the Virgin, who read out of a Book, That this Wedding might tend to the Honour of God, and our own benefit. Afterwards we came into the second Chamber, where the first Virgin hung up.
up her weight also, and so forward till all the Ceremonies were finished. Hereupon the Queen again presented her Hand to every one, and departed thence with her Virgin. Our President stayed yet a while with us. But because it had been already two hours night, she would no longer detain us; me thought she was glad of our Company, yet she bid us good night, and wished us quiet rest, and so departed friendly, although unwillingly from us. Our Pages were well instructed in their business, and therefore shewed every Man his Chamber, and stayed also with us in another Pallet, that in case we wanted any thing we might make use of them. My Chamber (of the rest I am not able to speak) was royally furnished with rare Tapiseries, and hung about with Paintings. But above all things I delighted in my Page, who was so excellently spoken, and experienced in the Arts, that he yet spent me another hour, and it was half an hour after three when first I fell asleep. And this indeed was the first night that I slept in quiet, and yet a scurvy Dream would not suffer me to rest; For I was all the night troubled troubled with a Door which I could not get open, but at last I did it. With these phantasies I passed the time, till at length towards day I awaked.

The fourth Day.

I still lay in my Bed, and leisurely surmised all the noble Images and Figures up and down about my Chamber, during which on a sudden I heard the Musick of Coronets, as if they had been already in Procession. My Page skipped out of the Bed as if he had been at his wits end, and looked more like one dead than living; in what case I then was, is easily imagiable, for, said he, The rest are already presented to the King; I knew not what else to do, but weep out-right, and Curse my own sloathfulness; Yet I dressed myself, but my Page was ready long before me, and ran out of the Chamber to see how affairs might yet stand. But he soon returned, and brought with him this joyful news, that that the time indeed was not yet past, only I had over-slept my Breakfast, they being unwilling to waken me because of my Age; But that now it was time for me to go with him to the Fountain where the most part were assembled; With this Consolation my Spirit returned again, wherefore I was soon ready with my Habit, and went after the Page to the Fountain in the afore-mentioned Garden, where I found that the Lyon instead of his Sword had a pretty large Tablet by him. Now having well viewed it, I found that it was taken out of the ancient Monuments, and placed here for some especial Honour. The Inscription was somewhat worn out with age, and therefore I am minded to set it down here, as it is, and give every one leave to consider it.

This Writing might well be read and understood, and may therefore fitly be here placed, because easier than any of the rest: Now after we had first washed our selves out of the Fountain, and every Man had taken a draught out of an entirely Golden Cup, we were once more again to follow the Virgin into the Hall, and there put on new Apparel, Apparel, which was all of Cloth of gold gloriously set out with Flowers. There was also given to every one another Golden Fleece, which was set about with precious Stones, and various Workmanship according to the utmost skill of each Artificer. On it hung a weighty Medal of Gold, whereon were figured the Sun and Moon in opposition; but on the other side stood this Poësie,

The light of the Moon shall be as the light of the Sun, and the light of the Sun shall be seven times lighter than at present. But Clinodia, our former Jewels were layed in a little Casket, and committed to one of the Waiters. After this the Virgin lead us out in our order, where the Musici ans waited ready at the door, all apparelled in red Velvet with white Guards. After which a Door (which I never saw open before) to the Royal winding-Stairs was unlocked; There the Virgin led us together with the Musick, up three hundred sixty five Stairs, there we saw nothing but what was of extrem costly and artificial Workmanship; and still the further we went, the more glorious still was the Furniture, until at length at the top we came under a painted Arch, where the sixty Virgins attended us, all Richly Appareled; Now as soon as they had bowed to us, and we as well as we could, had returned our reverence, our Musitians were dispatched away, who were fain to go down the winding-Stairs again, the Door being shut after them. After this a little Bell was tolled; then came in a beautiful Virgin who brought every one a wreath of Laurel; But our Virgins had Branches given them: Mean while a Curtain was drawn up; Where I saw the King and Queen as they sat there in their Majesty, and had not the yesterdays Queen so faithfully warned me, I should have forgotten my self, and have equalled this unspeakable glory to Heaven. For besides that the Room glistered of meer Gold and preitious Stones; the Queen's Robes were moreover so made, that I was not able to behold them. And whereas I before esteemed any thing for handsom, here all things so much surpassed the rest, as the Stars in Heaven are elevated. In the mean time the Virgin stept in, and so each of the virgins taking one of us by the hand, with most profound Reverence presented us to the King. Whereupon the Virgin began thus to speak. That to honour your Royal Majesties, (most gracious King and Queen) these Lords here present have adventured hither with peril of Body and Life; your Majesties have reason to rejoice, especially since the greatest part are qualified for the enlarging of your Majesties Estates and Empire, as you will find the same by a most gracious and particular examination of each of them. Herewith I was desirous thus to have them, in Humility presented to your Majesties, with most humble suit to discharge me of this my Commission, and most graciously to take sufficient information from each of them, concerning both my Actions and Omissions. Hereupon she laid down her Branch upon the ground. Now it would have been very fitting for one of us to have put in and spoken somewhat on this occasion, but seeing we were all troubled with the falling of the Uvula, at length the old Atlas stept forward and spoke on the King's behalf; Their Royal Majesties do most graciously rejoice at your arrival, and will that their Royal Grace be assured to all, and every Man: And with thy Administration, gen-the Virgin, they are most gratiously satisfied, & accordingly a Royal Reward shall therefore be provided for thee; yet it is still their intention, that thou shalt this day also continue with them, in as much as they have no reason to mistrust thee. Hereupon the Virgin humbly took up the Branch again. And so we for this first time were to step aside with our Virgin. This room was square on the front, five times broader than it was long; but towards the West it had a great Arch like a Porch, wherein stood in circle three glorious Royal Thrones, yet the middlemost was somewhat higher than the rest. Now in each Throne sat two persons, in the first seat a very antient King with a gray Beard, yet his Comfort was extraordinary fair and young. In the third Throne sat a black King of middle Age, and by him a dainty old Matron, not Crowned, but covered with a Vail. But in the middle seat the two young Persons, who tho' they had likewise Wreaths of Laurel upon their Heads, yet over them hung a large and costly Crown. Now albeit they were not at this time so fair as I had before imagined to my self, yet so it was to be.

Behind them on a round Form sat for the most part antiqu M*en, yet none of them (at which I wondered) had any Sword, or other Weapon about him; None saw I any other Life-guard, but certain Virgins which were with us the day before, who sat on the sides of the Arch. Here can I not pass in silence how the little Cupid flew to and again there, but for the most part he hovered and played the wanton about the great Crown; sometimes he seated himself in between the two Lovers, somewhat smiling upon them with his Bow. Nay, sometimes he made as if he would shoot one of us; In brief, this Knave was so full of his waggery, that he would not spare even the little Birds, which in multitudes flew up and down the Room, but tormented them all he could. The Virgins also had their pastimes with him, but whenever they could catch him, it was not so easy a matter for him to get from them again. Thus this little Knave made all the sport and mirth. Before the Queen stood a small, but unexpressibly curious Altar: wherein lay a Book covered with black Velvet, only a little overlaid with... with Gold; by this stood a small Taper in an Ivory Candlestick, now although it were very small, yet it burnt continually, and stood in that manner, that had not Cupid, in sport, now and then puffed upon it, we could not have conceived it to be Fire. By this stood a Sphere or Celestial Globe, which of its self turned clearly about. Next this, a small striking-Watch, by that a little Christal Pipe or Syphon-Fountain, out of which perpetually ran a clear blood-red Liquor; and last of all a Scull, or Death's-Head; in this was a white Serpent, which was of such a length, that though she crept circle-wise about the rest of it, yet her Taile still remained in one of the Eye-holes, until her Head again entered at the other, so she never stirred from her Scull, unless it happened that Cupid twitched a little at her, for then she slipt in so suddenly, that we all could not choose but marvel at it: Together with this Altar, there were up and down the Room wonderful Images, which moved themselves, as if they had been alive, and had so strange a contrivance, that it would be impossible for me to relate it all: like-likewise as we were passing out, there began such a marvellous kind of vocal Music, that I could not certainly tell, whether it were performed by the Virgins who yet stayed behind, or by the Images themselves. Now we being for this time satisfied, went thence with our Virgins, who, the Musitians being already present, led us down the winding Stairs again, but the Door was diligently locked and bolted. As soon as we were come again into the Hall; one of the Virgins began: I wonder, Sister, that you durst adventure your self amongst so many Persons: My Sister, replied our President, I am fearful of none so much as of this Man, pointing at me: This speech went to the Heart of me: For I well understood that she mocked at my Age, and indeed I was the oldest of them all. Yet she comforted me again with promise, That in case I behaved myself well towards her, she would easily rid me of this burden. Mean time a Collation was again brought in, and every one's Virgin feated by him, who well knew how to shorten the time with handsome discourses: But what their discourses and and sports where I dare not blab out of School. But most of the questions were about the Arts, whereby I could lightly gather that both young and old were conversant in the Sciences. But still it run in my thoughts how I might become young again, whereupon I was somewhat the fadder; This the Virgin perceived, and therefore began, I dare lay any thing, if I lye with him to night, he shall be pleasanter in the morning. Hereupon they began to laugh, and albeit I blushed all over, yet I was fain to laugh too at my own ill-luck. Now there was one there that had a mind to return my disgrace again upon the Virgin; whereupon he said, I hope not only we, but the Virgins too themselves will bear witness in behalf of our Brother, that our Lady President hath promised her self to be his Bed-fellow to Night: I should be well content with it, replied the Virgin, if I had not reason to be afraid of these my Sisters, there would be no hold with them should I chuse the best and handsomest for my self, against their will. My Sister presently began another, We find hereby that thy high Office makes thee not proud; wherefore if by thy permission we might by lot past the Lords here present, amongst us, for Bed-fellows, thou shouldst with our goodwill have such a Prerogative. We let this pass thus for a while, and began again to discourse together. But our Virgin could not leave tormenting us, and therefore began again, My Lords, how if we should permit Fortune to decide which of us must lie together to Night? Well, said I, if it may be no otherwise, we cannot refuse such a proposal. Novv because it was concluded to make this tryal after Meat, we resolved to sit no longer at Table, so we arose, and each one walked up and down with his Virgin. Nay, said the Virgin, It shall not be so yet, but let us see how Fortune will couple us; upon which we were separated asunder: But now, first arose a dispute how the business should be carried, but this was only a premeditated device, for the Virgin instantly made the proposal that we should mix our selves together in a Ring, and that she beginning to count from her self, the seventh, was to be content with the following seventh, whether it were a Virgin, or man; for our parts we were not aware of any craft, and therefore therefore permitted it so to be; but when we thought we had very well mingled ourselves, the Virgins nevertheless were so subtil, that each one knew her station before-hand: The Virgin began to reckon, the seventh next her was again a Virgin, the third seventh a Virgin likewise, and this happened so long till (to our amazement) all the Virgins came forth, and none of us was hit; Thus we poor pitiful Wretches remained standing alone, and were moreover forced to suffer our selves to be jeared too, and confess we were very handsomely couzened. In short, who ever had seen us in our order, might sooner have expected the Skye to fall, then that it should never have come to our turn. Herewith our sport was at an end, and we were fain to satisfie our selves with the Virgins Waggery. In the interim, the little wanton Cupid came also in unto us; But because he presented himself on behalf of their Royal Majesties, and delivered us a Health (as from them) out of a golden Cup, and was to call our Virgins to the King, withal declaring he could at this time tarry no longer with.
with them, we could not sufficiently sport our selves with him: So with a due return of our most humble thanks we let him flye forth again. Now because (in the interim) the mirth began to fall into my Confort's Feet, and the Virgins were nothing sorry to see it, they quickly lead up a civil Dance, whom I rather beheld with pleasure, then affisted. For my Mercurialists were so ready with their Postures, as if they had been long of the Trade. After some few Dances, our president came in again, and told us how the Artists and Students had offered them-selves to their Royal Majesties, for their Honour and Pleasure, before their departure to act a Merry Comedy; and if we thought good to be present at it, and to waite upon their Royal Majesties to the House of the Sun, it would be acceptable to them, and they would most gratiously acknowledge it: Here-upon in the first place we returned our most humble thanks for the Honour vouchsafed us, not only so, but moreover most submissively tendered our small service, which the Virgin related again, and presently brought word to attend attend their Royal Majesties (in our order) in the Gallery, whither we were soon led, and stayed not long there; for the Royal Procession was just ready, yet without any Musick at all. The unknown Queen, who was Yesterday with us, went foremost, with a small and costly Coronet, apparréled in white Sattin, she carried nothing but a small Crucifix which was made of a Pearl, and this very day wrought between the young King, and his Bride. After her went the six fore-mentioned Virgins, who first in two ranks, who carried the King's Jewels belonging to the little Altar: next to these came the three Kings. The Bridegroom was in the midst of them, in a plain dress, only in black Sattin, after the Italian Mode. He had on a small round black Hat, with a little black pointed Feather, which he courteously put off to us, thereby to signify his favour towards us. To him we bowed our selves, as also to the first, as we had been before instructed. After the Kings came the three Queens, two whereof were richly habited, only the one in the middle went likewise all in black, and Cupid held up her Train; after this intimation was given to us, to follow, and after us the Virgins, till at last old Atlas brought up the rear. In such Procession, through many stately Walks, we at length came to the House of the Sun, there next to the King and Queen, upon a richly furnished Scaffold, to behold the fore-ordained Comedy: We indeed, though Separated, stood on the right Hand of the Kings, but the Virgins on the left, except those, to whom the Royal Ensignes were committed. To them was allotted a peculiar standing at top of all. But the rest of the attendants were fain to stand below between the columns, and therewith to be content. Now because there are many remarkable Passages in this Comedy, I will not omit in brief to run it over.

First of all came forth a very ancient King, with some Servants; before whose Throne was brought a little Chest, with mention, that it was found upon the Water. Now it being opened, there appeared in it a lovely Babe, together with certain Jewels, and a small Letter of Parchment sealed, and superscribed to the King. Which the King therefore presently opened, and having read it.
it, wept; and then declared to his Servants how injuriously the King of the Moore had deprived his Aunt of her Country, and had extinguished all the Royal Seed even to this Infant, with the Daughter of which Country he had now purposed to have matched his Son. Hereupon he swore to maintain perpetual enmity with the Moore, and his Allies, and to revenge this upon him; and therewith commanded that the Child should be tenderly nursed, and to make preparation against the Moore. Now this provision and the discipline of the young Lady (who after she was a little grown up was committed to an ancient Tutor) continued all the first Aet; with many very fine and laudable sports besides.

In the interlude a Lyon and Griffon were set at one another, to fight, and the Lyon got the victory; which was also a pretty fight.

In the second Aet, the Moore, a very black treacherous Fellow, came forth also; who having with vexation understood that his Murder was discovered, and that too a little Lady was craftily stolen from him; began thereupon to consult how by stratagem he might might be able to encounter so powerful an adversary, whereof he was at length advised by certain Fugitives who, by reason of Famine fled to him: So the young Lady contrary to all mens expectation, fell again into his Hands: Whom, had he not been wonderfully deceived by his own Servants, he had like to have caused to be slain. Thus this Act too was concluded with a marvelous triumph of the Moore.

In the third Act a great Army, on the King's party was raised against the Moore; and put under the conduct of an antient valiant Knight, who fell into the Moore's Country, till at length he forceably rescued the young Lady out of the Tower, and Apparrelled her a new. After this in a trice they erected a glorious Scaffold, and placed their young Lady upon it: presently came twelve Royal Embassadors, amongst whom the fore-mentioned Knight made a Speech, alleding that the King his most gracious Lord had not only heretofore delivered her from death, and even hitherto caused her to be royally brought up (though she had not behaved herself altogether as became her) but moreover his Royal H Majesty.
Majesty had, before others, elected her, to be a Spouse for the young Lord his Son; and most gratiously desired that the said espousals might be really executed in case they would be sworn to his Majesty upon the following Articles. Hereupon out of a Patent he caused certain glorious conditions to be read, which if it were not too long, were well worthy to be here recounted. In brief, the young Lady took an Oath inviolably to observe the same; returning thanks withal in most seemly sort for this so high a Grace. Whereupon they began to sing to the Praise of God, of the King, and the young Lady; and so for this time departed.

Interludium

For sport, in the mean while, the four Beasts of Daniel, as he saw them in the Vision, and hath at large described them, were brought in, all which had its certain significatioin.

In the fourth Act the young Lady was again restored to her loft Kingdom, and Crowned, and for a space, in this array, conducted about the place with extraordinary joy: after this many & various Embassadors presented themselves, not only to wish her prosperity, but also to to behold her Glory. Yet it was not long that she preserved her Integrity, but soon began again to look wantonly about her, and to wink at the Embassadors and Lords; wherein she truly acted her part to the Life.

These her manners were soon known to the Moore, who would by no means neglect such an opportunity, and because her Steward had not sufficient regard to her, she was easily blinded with great promises, so that she had no good confidence in her King, but privily submitted her self to the entire disposal of the Moore. Hereupon the Moore made haste, and having (by her consent) gotten her into his Hands, he gave her good words so long till all her Kingdom had subjected it self to him: After which in the third Scene of this Act, he caused her to be led forth, and first to be stript stark naked, and then upon a scurvy wooden Scaffold to be bound to a Post, and well scourged, and at last sentenced to Death. This was so woful a Spectacle, that it made the Eyes of many to run over. Hereupon thus naked as she was, she was cast into Prilon, there to expect her Death, which was to be procured by Peyson, which yet killed her not, but made her Leprous all over. Thus this Act was for the most part lamentable.

Between, they brought forth Nebuchadnezzar's Image, which was adorn'd with all manner of Arms, on the Head, Breast, Belly, Legs and Feet, and the like; of which too more shall be spoken in the future explication.

In the fifth Act the young King was acquainted with all that had passed between the Moore and his future Spouse, who first interceded with his Father for her, intreating that she might not be left in that condition; which his Father having agreed to, Embassadors were dispatched to comfort her in her Sickness and Captivity, but yet withal to give her notice of her inconsideratedness. But she would not yet receive them, but consented to be the Moore's Concubine, which was also done, and the young King was acquainted with it.

After this comes a band of Fools, each of which brought with him a Cudgel, where with in a trice they made a great Globe of the World, and as soon undid it again. It was a fine Sportive Phantast.
In the sixth Act the young King resolved to bid battle to the Moore, which also was done. And albeit the Moore was discomfitted, yet all held the young King too for dead. At length he came to himself again, released his Spouse, and committed her to his Steward and Chaplain.

The first whereof tormented her mightily; at last the leaf turned over, and the Priest was so insolently wicked, that he would needs be above all, until the same was reported to the young King, who hastily dispatched one who broke the Neck of the Priest’s mightiness, and adorned the Bride in some measure for the Nuptials.

After the Act a vast artificial Elephant was brought forth. He carried a great Tower with Musitians: which was also well-pleasing to all.

In the last Act the Bride-groom appeared in such pomp as is not well to be believed, and I was amazed how it was brought to pass: The Bride met him in the like Solemnity. Whereupon all the People cried out Vivat sponsus, vivat sponsa. So that by this Comedy they did with all congratulate our King and Queen in the most most stately manner: Which (as I well observed) pleased them most extraordinary well.

At length they made some passages about the stage in such procession, till at last they altogether began thus to sing.

Cantilena.
This time full of love
Does our joy much improve Because of the King's Nuptial;
And therefore let's sing
That from all parts 't may ring:
Blest be he that granted us all.

The Bride most exquisitely faire:
Whom we attended with long care.
To him in troth's now plighted:
We fully have at length obtain'd,
The same for which we did contend:
He's happy, that's fore-sighted.

Now the Parents Kind and good
By intreaties are subdued:
Long enough in bold was she made;
In honour increase,
Till thousands arise.
And spring from your own proper Blood.

Epilogus.  After this thanks were returned, and The Comedy was finished with joy, and the particular good liking of the Royal Persons wherefore (the Evening also being already hard by) they departed together in their fore-mentioned order. But we were to attend the Royal Persons up the winding Stairs into the forementioned Hall, where the Tables were already richly furnished, and this was the first time that we were invited to the Kings table. The little Altar was placed in the midst of the Hall, and the six fore-named Royal Ensignes were laid on it. At this time the young King behaved himself very gratiously towards us; but yet he could not be heartily Merry; but howbeit he now and then discoursed a little with us, yet he often sighed, at which the little Cupid only mocked, and played his waggish tricks. The old King and Queen were very serious, only the Wife of one of the ancient Kings was gay enough; the cause whereof I yet understood not. During this, the Royal Persons took up the first Table, at the second we only Sate. At the third, some of the principal Virgins placed themselves: The rest of the Virgins, and Men, were all fain to wait.
wait. This was performed with such state and solemn stillness, that I am afraid to make many words of it. Here I cannot leave untouched how that all the Royal Persons, before Meat, attired themselves in Snow-white glittering Garments, and so sat down to Table. Over the Table hung the aforementioned great Golden Crown, the precious Stones whereof, without any other Light, would have sufficiently illuminated the Hall. However all the Lights were kindled at the small Tapers upon the Altar; what the reason was I did not certainly know. But this I took very good notice of, that the young King frequently sent Meat to the white Serpent upon the little Altar, which caused me to muse. Almost all the Prattle at this Banquet was made by little Cupid, who could not leave us (and me indeed especially) untormented. He was perpetually producing some Strange matter. However, there was no considerable Mirth, all went silently on; from whence I, by my self, could imagin some great imminent Peril. For there was no Musick at all heard; but if we were demanded any thing, we were fain to give short round answers; and so let it rest. In short, all things had so strange a face, that the sweat began to trickle down all over my body; and I am apt to believe that the heartiest Man alive would then have lost his courage. Supper being now almost ended, the young King commanded the Book to be reached him from the little Altar. This he opened, and caused it once again by an old Man to be propounded to us, whether we resolved to abide with him in Prosperity and Adversity; which we having with trembling consented to, he further caused us sadly to be demanded, whether we would give him our Hands on it, which, when we could find no evasion, was fain so to be. Hereupon one after another arose, and with his own Hand writ himself down in this Book. When this also was performed, the little Christal Fountain, together with a very small Christal Glass was brought near, out of which all the Royal Persons one after another Drank, afterwards it was reached to us too, and so forward to all Persons, and this was called, the Draught of Silence. Hereupon all the Royal Royal Persons presented us their Hands, declaring that in case we did not now stick to them, we should now and never more hereafter see them; which verily made our Eyes run over. But our president engaged her self and promised very largely on our behalf, which gave them Satisfaction. Mean time a little Bell was tolled, at which all the Royal Persons waxed so mighty bleak, that we were ready utterly to despair. They quickly put off their white Garments again, and put on entirely black ones; The whole Hall likewise was hung about with black Velvet, the Floor was covered with black Velvet, with which also the Cieling above (all this being before Prepared.) was overspread. After that the Tables were also removed away, and all had seated themselves round about upon the Form; and we also had put on black habits; in comes our President again who was before gone out, and brought with her six black Taffata Scarfs, with which she bound the six Royal Person Eyes. Now when they could no longer see, there were immediately brought in by the Servants six covered Coffins, and set down in the Hall, also a low black seat placed in the midst. Finally, there stepped in a very colé-black tall Man, who bare in his hand a sharp Ax. Now after that the old King had been first brought to the Seat, his Head was instantly whipt off, and wrapped up in a black Cloth, but the Blood was received into a great golden Goblet, and placed with him in the Coffin that stood by, which being covered, was set aside. Thus it went with the rest also, so that I thought it would at length have come to me too, but it did not; For as soon as the six Royal Persons were Beheaded, the black Man went out again; after whom another followed, who Beheaded him too just before the Door, and brought back his Head together with the Ax, which were laid in a little Chest. This indeed to me seemed a bloody Wedding, but because I could not tell what would yet be the event, I was fain for that time to captivate my understanding until I were further resolved. For the Virgin too, seeing that some of us were faint-hearted and wept, bid us be content. For, said she to us, The Life of these standeth Solatium now. now in your hands; and in case you follow me, this Death shall make many alive. Here with the intimated we should go sleep, & trouble our selves no further on our part; for they should be sure to have their due right; And so she had us all good night, saying, That she must watch the dead Corps this night: We did so, and we were each of us conducted by our Pages into our Lodgings. My Page talked with me of sundry and various matters (which I still very well remember) and gave me cause enough to admire at his understanding: But his intention was to lull me asleep, which at last I well observed, whereupon I made as though I was fast asleep, but no sleep came into my Eyes, and I could not put the Headed out of my mind. Now my Lodging was directly over against the great Lake, so that I could well look upon it, the Windows being nigh the Bed. About midnight, as soon as it had struck twelve, on a sudden I espied on the Lake a great Fire, wherefore out of fear I quickly opened the Window to see what would become of it; Then from far I saw seven Ships making forward, which were all stuck full full of Lights. Above on the top of each of them hovered a Flame, that pasted to and fro, and sometimes descended quite down, so that I could lightly judge that it must needs be the Spirit of the Beheaded. Now these Ships gently approached to Land, and each of them had no more than one Mariner. As soon as they were now gotten to Shore, I presently espied our Virgin with a Torch going towards the Ships, after whom the six covered Coffins, together with the little Chest, were carried; and each of them privately laid in a Ship. Wherefore I awaked my Page too, who hugely thanked me for having run much up and down all the day, he might quite have over-slept this, tho' he well knew it. Now as soon as the Coffins were laid in the Ships, all the Lights were exstinguished, and the six Flames passed back together over the Lake, so that there was no more but one Light in each Ship for a Watch. There were also some hundreds of Watch-men who had encamped themselves on the Shore, and sent the Virgin back again into the Catle, who carefully bolted all up again;
so that I could well judge that there was nothing more to be done this night, but that we must expect the day; so we again betook our selves to rest. And I only of all my Company had a Chamber towards the Lake, and saw this, so that now I was also extrem weary, and so fell asleep in my manifold Speculations.

The fifth Day.

The night was over, and the dear wished for day broken, when hastily I got me out of the Bed, more desirous to learn what might yet infile, than that I had sufficiently slept; Now after that I had put on my Cloaths, and according to my custom was gone down the Stairs, it was still too early, and I found no body else in the Hall, wherefore I intreated my Page to lead me a little about in the Castle, and shew me somewhat that was rare, who was now (as always) willing, and presently lead me down certain steps under ground, to a great Iron Door, on which the following Words in great Copper Letters, were fixed.
This I thus copied, and set down in my Table-Book. Now after this Door was opened, the Page led me by the hand through a very dark Passage, till we came again to a very little Door, that was now only put too, For (as the Page informed me) it was first opened but yesterday when the Coffins were taken out, and had not been since shut. Now as soon as we stepped in, I espied the most precious thing that Nature ever created: For this Vault had no other light but from certain huge great Carbuncles; And this (as I was informed) was the King's Treasury. But the most glorious and principal thing, that I here saw, was a Sepulcher (which stood in the middle) so rich that I wondered it was no better guarded; whereunto unto the Page answered me, That I had good reason to be thankful to my Planet, by whose influence it was, that I had now seen certain pieces which no humane Eye else (except the King's Family) had ever had a view of. This Sepulcher was triangular, and had in the middle of it a Kettle of polished Copper, the rest was of pure Gold and preitious Stones; In the Kettle stood an Angel, who held in his Arms an unknown Tree, from which it continually dropped into the Kettle; and as oft as the Fruit fell into the Kettle, it turned into Water too, and ran out from thence into three small Golden Kettles standing by. This little Altar was supported by these three Animals, an Eagle, an Ox and a Lyon, which stood on an exceeding costly Base. I asked my Page what this might signify: Here, said he, lies Buried Lady Venus, that Beauty which hath undone many a great Man, both in Fortune, Honour, Blessing and Prosperity. After which he shewed me a Copper Door on the Pavement. Here (said he) if you please, we may go further down; I still follow you (replied I) so I went down the steps, where it was exceeding dark, but the Page immediately diately opened a little Chest, wherein stood a small ever-burning Taper, at which he kindled one of the many Torches which lay by. I was mightily terrified, and seriously asked how he durst do this? He gave me for answer, As long as the Royal Persons are still at rest, I have nothing to fear. Herewith I espied a rich Bed ready made, hung about with curious Curtains, one of which he drew, where I saw the Lady Venus stark-naked (for he heaved up the Coverlets too) lying there in such Beauty, and a fashion so surprizing, that I was almost besides myself, neither do I yet know whether it was a piece thus Carved, or an humane Corps that lay dead there; For she was altogether immovable, and yet I durst not touch her. So she was again covered, and the Curtain drawn before her, yet she was still (as it were) in my Eye. But I soon espied behind the Bed a Tablet, on which it was thus written.
I asked my Page concerning this Writing, but he laughed, with promise that I should know it too. So he putting out the Torch, we again ascended. Then I better viewed all the little Doors, and first found, that on every corner there burned a small Taper of Lyrites, of which I had before taken no notice; for the Fire was so clear, that it looked much liker a Stone than a Taper. From this heat the Tree was forced continually to melt, yet it still produced new Fruit. Now behold (said the Page) what I heard revealed to the King by Atlas, When the Tree (said he) shall be quite melted down, Then shall Lady Venus awake, and be the Mother of a King.
Whilst he was thus speaking, in flew the little Cupid, who at first was somewhat abashed at our presence, but seeing us both look more like the Dead then the Living, he could not at length refrain from Laughing. Demanded what Spirit had brought me thither, whom I with trembling answered, that I had lost my way in the Castle, and was by chance come hither, and that the Page likewise had been looking up and down for me, and at last lited upon me here, I hoped he would not take it amiss. Nay, then 'tis well enough yet, said Cupid, my old brute Granstir, but you might lightly have served me a scurvy trick, had you been a ware of this Door. Now I must look better to it, and so he put a strong Lock on the Copper Door, where we before descended. I thanked God that he lited upon us no sooner, my Page too was the more jocond, because I had so well helped him at this pinch. Yet can I not (said Cupid) let it pass unrevenge, that you were so near stumbling upon my dear Mother; with that he put the point of his Dart into one of the little Tapers, and heating it a little, pricked me with it on the hand, which at that time I litt-little regarded, but was glad that it went so well with us, and that we came off without further danger. Mean time, my Companions were gotten out of Bed too, and were again returned into the Hall. To whom I also joyned my self, making as if I were then first risen.

After Cupid had carefully made all fast again, he came likewise to us, and would needs have me shew him my hand, where he still found a little drop of blood, at which he heartily laughed, and bade the rest have a care of me, I would shortly end my days. We all wondered how Cupid could be so merry, and have no fence at all of the yester-day's sad passages. But he was no whit troubled. Now our President had in the mean time made her self ready for the Journey, coming in all in black Velvet, yet the still bare her branch of Laurel, her Virgins too had their Branches. Now all things being in readiness, the Virgin bid us first drink somewhat, and then presently prepare for the proces-sion; wherefore we made no long tarrying, but followed her out of the Hall into the Court. In the Court stood six Coffins, and my Companions thought no other but that the six Royal Persons lay lay in them, but I well observed the device. Yet I knew not what was to be done with these other. By each Coffin were eight muffled Men. Now as soon as the Musick went (it was so mournful & dolesome a tune, that I was astonished at it) they took up the Coffins, and we (as we were ordered) were fain to go after them into the formentioned Garden, in the midst of which was erected a wooden Edifice, having round about the Roof a glorious Crown, and standing upon seven Columns; within it were formed six Sepulchers, and by each of them a stone, but in the middle it had a round hollow rising stone: In these Graves the Coffins were quietly and with many Cerimonies layed: The stones were shoved over them, and they shut fast. But the little Chest was to lie in the middle. Herewith were my Companions deceived, for they imagined no other but that the Dead Corps were there. Upon the top of all there was a great Flag, having a Phenix painted on it, perhaps therewith the more to delude us. Here I had great occasion to thank God that I had seen more than the rest. Now after the Funerals were done, the Virgin, having to Regum.
Our Ships had each of them a peculiar device. Five of them indeed had the five regular Bodies, each a fever.

Then, having placed her self upon the middle of Stone, made a short Oration, That we should be content to our ingagements, and not repine at the pains we were hereafter to undergo, but be helpful in restoring the present buried Royal Persons to Life again, and therefore without delay to rise up, and accordingly to make a Journey to the Tower of Olympus, to fetch from thence Medicines useful and necessary for this purpose. This we soon agreed to, and following her through another little door quite to the Shore, the seven fore-mentioned Ships stood all empty, on which all the Watch-men returned into the Branches, and after they had distributed us in the fix Ships they caused us in the name of God to begin our Voyage, and looked up as long as they could have us in sight, after which they with all the Watch-mea, returned into the Castle. Moor lay, in this were twelve Musitians, who played excellent well; its device was a Pyramid. Next followed three abreast, b, c, and d, in which we were disposed, I fate in c. In the midst behind these came the two fairest and stateliest Ships, e and f, stuck about with many Branches of Laurel, having no Passengers in them; their Flags were the Sun and Moon. But in the rear only one Ship g, in this were Forty Virgins. Now being thus passed over this Lake, we first came through a narrow Arm, into the right Sea, where all the Syrens, Nymphs, and Sea-Goddeses had attended us; wherefore they immediately dispatched a Sea-Nymph to us to deliver their Present and Offering of Honour to the Wedding. It was a costly, great, fat, round, and Orient Pearl; the like to which hath not at any time been seen, either in ours, or yet in the new World. Now the Virgin having friendly received it, the Nymph further intreated that audience might be given to their Divertisements, and to make a little stand, which the Virgin was content to do, and commanded the two great Ships to stand into 40 Virgines comites. into the middle, and with the rest to encompass them in Pentagon. After which the Nymphs fell into a ring about them, and with a most delicate sweet voice began thus to sing.

There's nothing better here below
Than beauteous, noble, Love; Whereby we like to God do grow,
And none to grief do move.
Wherefore let's chant it to the King,
That all the Sea thereof may ring.

We question; Answer you.

II

What was it that at first us made?
'Twas Love.

And what hath Grace a fresh convey'd?
'Tis Love.

Whence was't (pray tell us) we were born?
Of Love.

How came we then again forlorn?
Sans Love.

III.

Who was it (say) that us conceived?
'Twas Love.

Who
Who Suckled, Nursed, and Reliev'd?
'Twas Love.

What is it we to our Parents owe?
'Tis Love.

Why do they us such kindness show?
Of Love.

IV
Who gets herein the Victory?
'Tis Love.

Can Love by search obtained be?
By Love.

How may a Man good works perform?
Through Love.

Who into one can two transform?
'Tis Love.

V
Then let our Song sound, Till it's Echo rebound.
To Loves honour and praise,
Which may ever increase
With our noble Prince, the King, & the Queen, The Soul is departed, their Body's within.

VI
And as long as we live, God graciously give;
That as great Love and Amity,
They bear each other mightily;
So we likewise, by Loves own Flame,
May reenjoy them once again.
Then this annoy
Into great joy
(If many thousand younglings design)
Shall change, and ever so remain.

They having with most admirable concerte and melody finished this Song, I no more wondered at Ulisses for stopping the Ears of his Companions; for I seemed to my self the most unhappy man alive, that Nature had not made me too to trim a creature. But the Virgin soon dispatched them, and commanded to set Sail from thence; wherefore the Nymphs too after they had been presented with a long, red Scarf for a gratuity; went off, and dispersed themselves in the Sea. I was at this time sensible, that Cupid began to work with me too, which yet tended but very little to my Credit, and for as much as my giddines is likely to be nothing beneficial to the Reader, I am resolved to let it rest as it is. But this was the very wound that in the first Book, I received on the head in a Dream: and let every one take warning by me of loitering loitering about Venus's Bed, for Cupid can by no means brook it. After some Hours, having in friendly discourses made a good way, we came within ken of the Tower of Olympiæ, wherefore the Virgin commanded by the discharge of some Pieces to give the signal of our approach, which was also done; and immediately we espied a great white Flag thrust out, and a small gilded Pinnacle sent forth to meet us. Now as soon as this was come to us, we perceived in it a very ancient man, the Warden of the Tower, with certain custos Guards cloathed in white, of whom we were Friendly received; and so conducted to the Tower. This Tower was Situated upon an Island exactly square, which was environed with a Wall so firm and thick, that I myself could not go over it in two hundred and sixty paces. On the other side of the wall was a fine Meadow with certain little Gardens, in which grew strange, and to me unknown, Fruits; and then again an inner Wall round about the Tower. The Tower itself was just as it were seven round Towers had been built one by another, yet the middlemost was some somewhat the higher, and within they all entered one into another, and had seven Storys one above another. Being thus come to the Gates of the Tower, we were led a little aside on the Wall, that so, as I well observed, the Coffins might be brought into the Tower without our taking notice; of this the rest knew nothing. This being done, we were conducted into the Tower at the very bottom, which albeit it were excellently painted, yet we had here till recreation, for this was nothing but a Laboratory, where we were fain to beat and wash Plants, and precious Stones, and all Sorts of Things, and extract their Juice and Essence, and put up the same in Glasses, and deliver them to be laid up. And truly our Virgin was so busy with us, and so full of her directions, that she knew how to give each of us employment enough, so that in this Island we were fain to be mere drudges, till we had achieved all that was necessary for the restoring of the Beheaded Bodies. Mean time (as I afterwards understood) three Virgins were in the first Apartment washing the Corps with all diligence. Now having at length almost done with this our preparation, nothing more was brought us, but some broath with a little draught of Wine, whereby I well observed, that we were not here for our pleasure; for when we had finished our days work too, every one had only a Mattress laid on the Ground for him, wherewith we were to content our selves. For my part I was not very much troubled with sleep, and therefore walked out into the Garden, and at length came as far as the Wall; and because the Heaven was at that time very clear, I could well drive away the time in contemplating the Stars; By chance I came to a great pair of Stone-Stairs, which led up to the top of the Wall. And because the Moon shone very bright, I was so much the more confident, and went up, and looked too a little upon the Sea, which was now exceeding calm; and thus having good opportunity to consider better of Astronomy, I found that this present Night there would happen such a conjunction of the Planets, the like to which was not otherwise suddenly to be observed. Now having looked a good while into the Sea, and it being just about Midnight, as soon as it had struck Twelve, I beheld from far the seven Flames passing over Sea hitherward, and betakeing themselves to the top of the Spire of the Tower. This made me somewhat afraid; for as soon as the Flames had settled themselves, the Winds arose, and began to make the Sea very Tempestuous. The Moon also was Covered with clouds, and my joy ended with such fear, that I had scarce time enough to hit upon the Stairs again, and betake my self again to the Tower. Now whether the Flames tarried any longer, or passed away again, I cannot say: For in this obscurity I durst no more venture abroad: So I laid me down upon my Mattress, and there being besides in the Laboratory a pleasant and gently purling Fountain, I fell a Sleep so much the sooner. And thus this fifth day too was concluded with Wonders.
Next morning, after we had awakened one another, we sat together a while to discourse what might yet be the event of things. For some were of opinion that they should all be enlivened again together! Others contradicted it, because the decease of the ancients was not only to restore life, but increase too to the young ones. Some imagined that they were not put to death, but that others were beheaded in their stead. We having now talked together a pretty while, in comes the Old Man to us, and first saluting us, looks about him to see if all things were ready, and the processes enough done. We had therein so behaved ourselves, that he had no fault to find with our diligence, whereupon he placed all the Glasses together, and put them into a case. Presently come certain youths bringing with them some Ladders, Roapes, and large Wings, which they laid down before us, and departed. Then the old Man began thus.
thus. My Dear Sons, one of these three things must each of you this day constantly bear about with him. Now it is free for you either to make a choice of one of them, or to call lots about it. We replied, we would choose. Nay; said he, let it rather go by lot. Hereupon he made three little Schedules, in one he writ Ladder, on the second Rope, on the third Wings; These he laid in an Hat, and each man must draw, and whatever he happened upon, that was to be his. Those who got the Ropes, imagined themselves to be in the best case, but I chanced on a Ladder, which hugely afflicted me, for it was twelve-foot long, and pretty weighty, and I must be forced to carry it, whereas the others could handsomely coyle their Ropes about them: and as for the Wings, the old Man joyned them so neatly on to the third fort, as if they had grown upon them. Hereupon he turned the Cock, and then the Fountain ran no longer, and we were fain to remove it, from the middle out of the way. After all things were carried off, he taking with him the Caske with the Glailles, took leave, and lock... ed the Door fast after him, so that we imagined no other but that we had been imprisoned in this Tower. But it was hardly a quarter of an Hour before a round Hole at the very top was uncovered, where we saw our Virgin, who called to us, and bid us good Morrow, desiring us to come up. They with the Wings were instantly above through the hole. Only they with the Ropes were in evil plight. For as soon as ever one of us was up, he was commanded to draw up the Ladder to him. At last each man's Rope was hanged on an Iron Hook, so every one was fain to climb up by his Rope as well as he could, which indeed was not compassed without Blisters. Now as soon as we were all well up, the hole was again covered, and we were friendly received by the Virgin. This Room was the whole breadth of the Tower itself, having Six very stately Vestries a little raised above the Room, and to be entered by the ascent of three Steps. In these Vestries we were distributed, there to pray for the Life of the King and Queen, mean while the Virgin went in and out at the little Door a, till we had done. For as soon as our process was absolved, there was brought in, and placed in the middle through the little Door, by twelve persons (which were formerly our Musitians) a wonderful thing of a longish shape, which my Companions took only to be a Fountain. But I well observed that the Corps's lay in it, for the inner Chest was of an oval Figure, so large that six Persons might well lie in it one by another. After which they again went forth, fetched their Instruments, and conducted in our Virgin, together with her she-attendants, with a most delicate noise of Musick. The Virgin carried a little Casket, but the rest only Branches, and small Lamps, and some too lighted Torches. The Torches were immediately given into our Hands, and we were to stand about the Fountain in this order.

First stood the Virgin A with her attendants in a Ring, round about with the Lamps & branches c, next stood we with our Torches b, then the Musitians d in a long rank, last of all the rest of the Virgins in another long rank too. Now whence the Virgins came, or whether they dwelt in the Castle, or whether they were brought in by night, I know not, for all their Faces were covered with delicate white Linnen, so that I could not know any of them. Hereupon the Virgin opened the Casket, in which there was a round thing wrapped up in a piece of green double Taffata. This she laid in the uppermost Kettle, and then covered it with the lid, which was full of holes, and had besides a Rim, on which she poured in some of the Water which we had the day before prepared, whence the Fountain began immediately to run, and through four small Pipes to drive into the little Kettle; beneath the undermost Kettle there were many sharp points, on which the Virgins stuck their Lamps, that so the heat might come to the Kettle, and make the Water Seeth. Now the Water beginning to Simper, by many little holes at a, it fell in upon the Bodies, and was so hot, that it dissolved them all, and turned them into Liquor. But what the above-said round wrapt up thing was, my Companions knew not, but I understood that that it was the Moor's Head, from which the Water conceived so great heat. At b round about the great Kettle, there were again many holes, in which they stuck their Branches; now whether this was done of necessity, or only for Ceremony, I know not; however these Branches were continually be-sprinkled by the Fountain, whence it afterwards dropt somewhat of a deeper Yellow into the Kettle. This lasted for near two Hours, that the Fountain still constantly ran of itself; but yet the longer, the fainter it was. Mean time the Musitians went their way, and we walked up and down in the Room; and truly the Room was somade, that we had opportunity enough to pass away our time: There was, for Images, Paintings, Clock-works, Organs, Spring-ing Fountains, and the like, nothing forgotten. Now it was near the time that the Fountain ceased, and would run no longer: upon which the Virgin commanded a round Golden Globe to be brought. But at the bottom of the Fountain there was a Tap, by which she let out all the matter that was dissoved by those hot Drops (whereof cer-tain tain quarts were then very Red) into the Globe. The rest of the Water which remained above in the Kettle, was poured out. And so this Fountain (which was now become much lighter) was again carried forth. Now whether it was opened abroad, or whether any thing of the Bodies that was further useful, yet remained; I dare not certainly say: But this I know, that the Water that was emptied into the Globe was much heavier then six, or yet more of us were well able to bear, albeit for its bulk it should have seemed not too heavy for one man. Now this Globe being with much ado gotten out of Doors, we again fate alone. But I perceiving a trampling over head; had an Eye to my Ladder: Hear one might take notice of the strange opinions my Companions had concerning this Fountain: For they not imagining but that the Bodies lay in the Garden of the Castle, knew not what to make of this kind of working, but I thanked God that I awaked in so opportune a time, and saw that which helped me the better in all the Virgins business. After one quarter of an hour the cover above above was again lifted of, and we com-mmanded to come up, which was done as before vvith Wings, Ladders, and Ropes. And it did not a little vex me, that vvhereas the Virgins could go up another vway, vve vvere fain to take fo much toil; yet I could vwell judge there must be some special reason in it, and vve must leave somewhat for the Old Man to do too. For even those vvith the Wings had no advantage by them but vvhen they vvere to mount through the Hole. Novv being gotten up thither also, and the Hole shut again, I saw the Globe hanging by a strong Chain in the middle of the Room. In this Room vwas nothing else but meer Windovvs, and still betwvven two Windovws there vvas a Door, vvitch vvas covered vvith nothing but a great polished Looking-Glafs; and these Windovvs and Looking-Glaffes were so optically opposed one to another, that although the Sun (vvwhich novv shined exceeding bright) beat only upon one Door, yet (after the Windovvs towards the Sun vvere opened, and the Doors before the Looking-Glaffes drawn aside) in all quarters of the Room
Room there was nothing but Suns; which by artificial Refractions beat upon the whole golden Globe hanging in the midst; and for as much as the same (besides that brightness) was polished; it gave such a Lustre, that none of us could open our Eyes, but were therefore forced to look out at Windows till the Globe was well heated, and brought to the desired effect. Here I may well avow that in these Mirrors I have seen the most wonderful Spectacle that ever Nature brought to light; for there were Suns in all places, and the Globe in the middle shined yet brighter, so that, but for one twinkling of an Eye, we could no more indure it than the Sun itself. At length the Virgin commanded to shut up the Looking-Glass again, and to make fast the Windows, and so let the Globe cool again a little; and this was done about seven of the Clock. Wherefore we thought good, since we might now have leisure a little to refresh our selves with a Breakfast: This Treatment again was right Philosophical, and we had no need to be afraid of Intemperance, yet we had no want. And the hope of the future joy (with which the Virgin continually comforted us) made us so joycond that we regarded not any pains, or inconvenience. And this I can truly say too concerning my Companions of high quality, that their minds never ran after their Kitchen or Table, but their pleasure was only to attend upon this adventurous Phisick, and hence to contemplate the Creator’s Wisdom and Omnipotency. After we had taken our Refection, we again settled our selves to work, for the Globe was sufficiently cooled; which with toil and labour we were to lift off the Chain and set upon the Floor. Now the dispute was how to get the Globe in sunder, for we were commanded to divide the same in the midst. The conclusion was that a sharp pointed Diamond would best do it. Now when we had thus opened the Globe, there was nothing of redness more to be seen, but a lovely great snowv-white Egg: It most mightily rejoiced us, that this was so well brought to pass. For the Virgin was in perpetuall care, least the Shell might still be too tender. We stood round about this Egg as joycond as if we ourselves had laid it. But the Virgin made it presently be carried forth, and departed her self too from us again, and (as all vvays) locked the Door to. But what she did abroad vwith the Egg; or vwhether it vvere some vway privately handled, I know not, neither do I believe it. Yet vve vvere again to pause together for one quarter of an hour, till the third hole vwere opened, and vve by means of our instruments vvere come upon the fourth Stone or Floor. In this Room vve found a great Copper Kettle filled vwith yellow Sand, vwhich vvas vvarmed vwith a gentle Fire, afterwards the Egg vvas raked up in it, that it might therein come to perfect maturity. This Kettle vvas exactly square, upon one side stood these two verses, Writ in great Leters.

Now whether the Sand or Egg were hereby meant, I leave to the learned to dispute, yet do I my part, and omit nothing undeclared. Our Egg being no Now ready was taken out; But it needed no cracking, for the Bird that was in it soon freed himself, and shewed himself very jocond, yet he looked very bloody and unshapen: We first set him upon the warm Sand, so the Virgin commanded, that before we gave him any thing to eat, we should be sure to make him fast, otherwise he would give us all work enough. This being done too, food was brought him, which surely was nothing else than the Blood of the Beheaded, deluted again with prepared water, by which the Bird grew so fast under our eyes, that we well saw why the Virgin gave us such warning of him. He bit and scratched so devilishly about him, that could he have had his will upon any of us, he would soon have dispatched him. Now he was wholly black, and wild, wherefore other meat was brought him, perhaps the blood of another of the Royal Persons, whereupon all his black Feathers moulted again, and instead of them there grew out Snow-white Feathers. He was somewhat tamer too, and suffered himself to be more tractable, nevertheless we did not yet trust him. At the third feeding ing his Feathers began to be so curiously coloured, that in all my Life I never saw the like colours for Beauty. He was also exceeding tame, and behaved himself so friendly with us, that (the Virgin consenting) we released him from his Captivity. 'Tis now reason (began our Virgin) since by your diligence, and our old man's consent, the Bird has attained both his Life, and the highest Perfection, that be be also joyfully Consecrated by us. Herewith she commanded to bring in Dinner, and that we should again refresh our selves, since the most troublesome part of our Work was now over, and it was fit we should begin to enjoy our passed Labours. We began to make our selves merry together. Hovvbeit we had still all our Mourning Cloaths on, which seemed somewhat reproachful to our Mirth. Now the Virgin was perpetually inquisitive, perhaps to find to which of us her future purpose might prove serviceable. But her discourse was for the most part about melting; and it pleased her well when any one seemed expert in such compendious Manuals, as do peculiarly commend an Artist. This Dinner lasted not above three. three quarters of an hour, which we yet for the most part spent with our Bird, whom we were fain constantly to feed with his meat: But he still continued much at the same growth. After Dinner we were not long suffered to digest our Meat; but after that the Virgin together with the Bird was departed from us. The fifth Room was set open to us, whither we got too after the former manner, and tended our Service. In this Room a Bath was prepared for our Bird, which was so coloured with a fine white Powder, that it had the appearance of meer Milk. Now it was at first cool when the Bird was set into it: He was mighty well pleased with it, drinking of it, and pleasantly sporting in it. But after it began to heat by reason of the Lamps that were placed under it, we had enough to do to keep him in the Bath. We therefore clapt a cover on the Kettle, and suffered him to thrust his head out through a hole, till he had in this sort lost all his Feathers in this Bath, and was as smooth as a new-born Child, yet the heat did him no further harm, at which I much marvelled; for in this Bath the Feathers were quite consum'd, and the Bath was thereby tinged into blew; at length we gave the Bird air, who of himself sprung out of the Kettle, and was so glitteringly smooth, that it was a pleasure to behold it. But because he was still somewhat wild, we were fain to put a collar, with a Chain, about his Neck, and led him up and down the Room. Mean time a strong Fire was made under the Kettle, and the Bath sodden away till it all came to a blew Stone, which we took out, and having first pounded it, we were afterwards fain to grind it on a Stone, and finally with this colour to paint the Bird's whole Skin over. Now he looked much more strangely, for he was all blew, except the head, which remained white. Herewith our work on this Story too was performed; And we (after the Virgin with her blew Bird was departed from us) were called up through the hole to the sixth Story; which was done too, there we were mightily troubled, for in the midst a little Altar, every way like that in the King's Hall above described, was placed. Upon which stood the six fore-mention'd... ed particulars, and he himself (the Bird) made the seventh. First of all the little Fountain was set before him, out of which he drank a good draught, afterwards he pecked upon the white Serpent until she bled mightily. This Blood were to receive into a Golden Cup, and pour it down the Bird's Throat, who was mighty averse from it, then dipt the Serpent's head in the Fountain, upon which she again revived, and crept into her Death's-head, so that I saw her no more for a long time after. Mean time the Sphere turned constantly on, until it made the desired conjunction. Immediately the watch Struck one upon which there was a going another conjunction. Then the Watch Struck two. Finally, whilst we were observing the third conjunction, and the same was indicated by the Watch, the poor Bird of himself submissive laid down his Neck upon the Book, and willingly suffered his Head (by one of us thereto chosen by lot) to be smitten off. Howbeit he yielded not one drop of Blood, till he was opened on the Breast, and then the Blood spun out so fresh and clear as if it had been a Fountain of Rubies. His Death...
Death went to the heart of us, and yet we might well judge, that a naked Bird would stand us in little stead, So we let it rest, and removed the little Altar away and assisted the Virgin to burn the Body (together with the little Tablet hanging by) to Ashes, with Fire kindled at the little Taper; afterwards to cleanse the same several times, and to lay them in a Box of Cypress Wood. Here I cannot conceal what a trick I and three more were served; After we had thus diligently taken up the Ashes, The Virgin began to speak thus. My Lords, we are here in the sixth Room, and have only one more before us, in which our trouble will be at an end, and then we shall return home again to our Castle, to awaken our most gracious Lords and Ladies. Now albeit I could heartily wish, that all of you, as you are here together, had behaved yourselves in such sort, that I might have given you Commendations to our most renowned King and Queen, and you have obtained a suitable Reward; yet because, contrary to my desire, I have found amongst you these four (herewith she pointed at me and three more) lazy and sluggish Labourers, and yet according to my good-will to all and every one, am not willing to deliver them up to condign punishment; However, that such Negligence may not remain wholly unpunished, I am purposed thus concerning them, that they shall only be excluded from the future seventh and most Glorious action of all the rest; and so too they shall incur no further blame from their Royal Majesties. In what a case we now were at this Speech, I leave others to consider: For the Virgin so well knew how to keep her countenance, that the Water soon ran over our Baskets, and we esteemed ourselves the most unhappy of all men. After this the Virgin by one of her Maids (whereof there were many always at hand) caused the Musitians to be fetched, who with Cornets to blow us out of Doors with such scorn and derision, that they themselves could hardly stand for laughing. But it did particularly mightily afflict us that the Virgin so vehemently laughed at our weeping, anger & impatience, and that there might well perhaps be some amongst our Companions who were glad of this our misfortune. But it proved otherwise. For as soon as we were come out at the Door, the Musitians bid us be of good cheer and fol-They led us up to the seventh Floor under the Roof, where we found the old Man, whom we had not hitherto seen, standing upon a little round Furnace. He received us friendly, and heartily congratulated us, that we were here chosen by the Virgin; but after he understood the affright we had conceived, his belly was ready to burst with Laughing, that we had taken such good Fortune so hainously. Hence said he, My Dear Sons learn, That Man never knoweth how well God intendeth him. During this discourse the Virgin also with her little Box came running in, who (after she had sufficiently laughed at us) emptied her Ashes out into another Vessel, and filled hers again with other matter, saying, she must now go cast a Mist before the other Artists Eyes, that we in the mean time should obey the old Lord in whatsoever he commanded us, and not remit our former diligence. Hence with she departed from us into the seventh Room whither she called our Companions. Now what she first did with them there, I cannot tell, for they were not only most earnestly forbidden to speak of it, but we too by reason of our business, durst not peep on them through the Ceiling. But this was our work, we were to moisten the Ashes with our fore-prepared Water till they became altogether like a very thin Dough. After which we set the matter over the Fire, till it was well beaten, then we cast it thus hot as it was into two little forms or moulds, and so let it cool a little (here we had leisure to look a while upon our Companions through certain crevices made in the Floor) they were now very busie at a Furnace, & each was himself fain to blow up the Fire with a pipe, and they stood thus blowing about it, as if they were ready to loose their breath. Howbeit, they imagined they were herein wondrously preferred before us. And this blowing lasted so long till our old Man rouzed us to our work again; So that I cannot say what was done afterwards. We having opened our little forms, there appeared two beautiful bright and almost Transparent little Images, the like to which Mans Eye never saw, a Male and a Female, each of them only four inches long; and that which most mightily surprised surprised me, was, that they were not hard, but limber and fleshy, as other human Bodies, yet had they no Life: So that I do most assuredly believe that the Lady Venus's Image was also made after some such way. These Angelically fair Babes we first laid upon two little Sattin Cushionets, and beheld them a good while; till we were almost besotted upon so exquisite an object. The old Lord warned us to forbear, and continually to instill the Blood of the Bird (which had been received into a little Golden Cup) drop after drop into the Mouths of the little Images, from whence they apparently to the Eye increased; and whereas they were before very small, they were now (according to proportion) much more beautiful; so that worthily all Limners ought to have been here, and have been ashamed of their Art in respect of these productions of Nature. Now they began to grow so big, that we lifted from the little Cushionets, and were fain to lay them upon a long Table, which was covered with white Velvet. The old man also commanded us to cover them over up to the Breast, with a piece of
of fine white double Taffeta, which because of their unspeakable beauty, almost went against us; but that I may be brief, before we had in this manner quite spent the Blood, they were already in their perfect full growth, they had Gold-yellow curled Hair, and the above-mentioned figure of Venus was nothing to them. But there was not yet any natural warmth, or sensibility in them, they were dead Figures, yes of a lively and natural colour: and since care was to be taken that they grew not too great, the old Man would not permit any thing more to be given them, but quite covered their Faces too with the Silk, and caused the Table to be stuck round about with Torches. Here I must warn the Reader that he imagine not these Lights to have been of necessity, for the old Man’s intent hereby, was only that we should not observe when the Soul entered into them, as indeed we should not have taken notice of it, in case I had not twice before seen the Flames; However, I permitted the other three to remain in their belief, neither did the old Man know that I had seen any thing more. Here-upon upon he bid us sit down on a Bench over against the Table: presently the Virgin came in too with the Musick and all furniture, and carried two curious white Garments, the like to which I had never seen in the Castle, neither can I describe them, for I thought no other but that they were meer Christal, but they were gentle, and not transparent, so that I cannot speak of them. There she laid down upon a Table, and after she had disposed her Virgins upon a Bench round about, she and the old Man began many Leger-demain tricks about the Table, which was done only to Blind us. This (as I told you) was managed under the roof, which was wonderfully formed, for on the inside it was arched into seven Hemispheres, of which the middlemost was somewhat the highest, and had at top a little round hole, which was nevertheless shut, and was observed by none else. After many Ceremonies, kept in six Virgins, each of which bare a large Trumpet, which were rouled about with a green glittering and burning material like a wreath, one of which the old Man took, and after he had removed some some of the lights at top, and uncovered their Faces, he placed one of the Trumpets upon the Mouth of one of the Bodies in such manner, that the upper and wider part of it was directed just against the forementioned hole. Here my Companions always looked upon the Images; but I had other thoughts; for as soon as the foliage or wreath about the Shank of the Trumpet was kindled, I saw the hole at top open, and a bright stream of Fire shooting down the Tube, and passing into the Body: whereupon the hole was again covered, and the Trumpet removed. With this device my Companions were deluded, so that they imagined that life came into the Image by means of the Fire of the foliage, for as soon as he received the Soul he twinkled with his Eyes, howbeit he scarce stirred. The second time he placed another Tube upon its Mouth, and kindled it again, and the Soul was let down through the Tube. This was repeated upon each of them three times, after which all the Lights were extinguished and carried away. The Velvet Carpets of the Table were cast together over them, and immediately a travelling villing Bed was unlocked and made ready, into which thus wrapped up they were born, and so after the Carpets were taken off them, they were neatly laid by each other, where with the Curtains drawn before them, they slept a good while. (Now was it also time for the Virgin to see how our other Artists behaved themselves, they were well pleased, because (as the Virgin afterwards informed me) they were to work in Gold, which is indeed a piece also of this art, but not the most Principal, most necessary, and best: They had indeed too a part of these Ashes, so that they imagined no other, but that the whole Bird was provided for the sake of Gold, and that life must thereby be restored to the deceased) during which we sate very still, attending when our married couple would awake, thus about half an hour was spent. For then the wanton Cupid presented himself again, and, after he had saluted us all, flew to them behind the Curtain, tormenting them so long till they awaked. This happened to them with very great amazement, for they imagined no other but that they had hitherto slept from the very hour in in which they were beheaded. Cupid, after he had awaked them, and renewed their acquaintance one with another, stepped a side a little, and permitted them both somewhat better to recuperate themselves, mean time playing his tricks with us; and at length he would needs have the Musick fetched to be somewhat the merrier. Not long after the Virgin herself comes: And after she had most humbly saluted the young King and Queen (who found themselves somewhat faint) and kissed their hands, she brought them the two forementioned curious Garments, which they put on, and so stepped forth. Now there were already prepared two very curious Chaires, wherein they placed themselves: and so were by us with most profound Reverence congratulated; for which the King in his own Person most graciously returned his thanks, and again re-assured us of all Grace. It was already about five of Clock, wherefore they could make no longer stay, but as soon as ever the chiefest of their furniture could be laden, we were to attend the young Royal Persons down the winding Stairs, through all Doors and and watches unto the Ship, in which they inbarqued themselves, together with certain Virgins, and Cupid, and failed so mighty swift that we soon lost sight of them, yet they were met (as I was informed) by certain stately Ships: Thus in four Hours time they had made many Leagues out at Sea. After five of Clock the Mutfitians were charged to carry all things back again to the Ships, and to make themselves ready for the Voyage. But because this was somewhat long a doing, the old Lord commanded forth a party of his concealed Soldiers, who had hitherto been planted in the Wall, so that we had taken no notice of any of them, whereby I observed that this Tower was well provided against opposition. Now these Soldiers made quick work with our stuff, so that no more remained further to be done, but to go to Supper. Now the Table being compleatly furnished, the Virgin brings us again to our Companions where we were to carry our selves as if we had truly been in a Lamentable condition, and forbear laughing. But they were alwaies finiling one upon another, hovvbeit some of them too sympathized vvith us. At this Supper the old Lord vvas vvith us too, vvho vvas a most sharp Inspector over us: For none could propound any thing so discreetly, but that he knew how either to confute it, or amend it, or at least to give some good document upon it. I learned most by this Lord, and it vvere very good that each one would apply himself to him, and take notice of his procedure, for then things would not so often, and so untowardly Miscarry. After we had taken our nocturnal refecion, the old Lord led us into his Closets of Rarities, which were here and there dispersed amongst the Bulworks, where we saw such wonderful productions of Nature, and other things too which mans wit in imitation of Nature had invented, that we needed a Year more sufficiently to surveigh them: Thus we spent a good part of the Night by Candle-light. At last, because we were more inclined to Sleep than see many Rarities, we were lodged in Rooms in the Wall, where we had not only costly good Beds, but also besides extraordinarily handsom Chambers, which made us... us the more wonder why we were the day before forced to undergo so many hardships. In this Chamber I had good rest; and being for the most part without care, and weary with continual Labour, the gentle rushing of the Sea helped me to a sound and sweet Sleep, for I continued in one Dream from eleven of Clock till eight in the morning.

The Seventh Day.

After eight of clock I awaked, and quickly made myself ready, being desirous to return again into the Tower, but the dark passages in the Wall were so many, and various, that I wandered a good while before I could find the way out. The same happened to the rest too, till at last we all met again in the neather most Vault, and habits entirely yellow were given us, together with our golden Fleeces. At that time the Virgin declared to us that we were Knights of the Golden Stang, of which we were before ignorant. After we had now thus made our selves ready, and taken our Breakfast, the old old Man presented each of us with a medal of Gold; on the one side stood these Words,

AR. NAT. MI.

On the other these, TEM. NA. F.

Exhorting us moreover we should entreprize nothing beyond and against this token of remembrance. Herewith we went forth to the Sea, where our Ships lay so richly equipped, that it was not well possible but that such brave things must first have been brought thither. The Ships were twelve in number, six of ours, and six of the old Lord's, who caused his Ships to be freighted with well appointed Soldiers. But he betook himself, to us; into our Ship, where we all were together; In the first the Musitians Seated themselves, of which the old Lord had also a great number, they failed before us to shorten the time. Our Flags were the twelve Celestial Signs, and we fete in Libra; besides other things, our Ship had also a noble and curious Clock, which shewed us us all the Minutes. The Sea too was so calm, that it was a singular pleasure to Sail. But that which surpassed all the rest, was the old Man’s discourse, who so well knew how to pass away our time with wonderful Histories, that I could have been content to Sail with him all my Life long. Mean time the Ships passed on amain, for before we had sailed two hours the Mariner told us that he already saw the whole Lake almost covered with Ships, by which we could conjecture they were come out to meet us, which also proved true: For as soon, as we were gotten out of the Sea into the Lake by the forementioned River, there presently stood in to us five hundred Ships, one of which sparkled with mere Gold and precious Stones, in which sat the King and Queen, together with other Lords, Ladies, and Virgins of high Birth. As soon as they were well in Ken of us the pieces were discharged on both sides, and there was such a din of Trumpets, Shalms, and Kettle Drums that all the Ships upon the Sea capered again. Finally, as soon as we came near they brought about our Ships together, and So made a stand, immediately the old Atlas stepped forth on the King’s behalf, making a short, but handsom oration, wherein he wellcomed us, and demanded whether the Royal Pre-tents were in readiness. The rest of my Companions were in an huge amazement, whence this King should arise, for they imagined no other but that they must again awaken him. We suffered them to continue in their wonderment, and carried our selves as if it seemed strange to us too. After Atlas’ oration out steps our old Man, making somewhat a larger reply, wherein he wished the King and Queen all happiness and increase, after which he delivered up a curious small Casket, but what was in it, I know not; only it was committed to Cupid, who hovered between them both to keep. After the oration was finished, they again let off a joyful Volle of Shot, and so we failed on a good time together, till at length we arrived at another Shore. This was near the first Gate at which I first entred: At this place again there attended a great Multitude of the King’s Family together with some hundreds of Horfes.

Horses. Now, as soon as we were come to shore, and disembarked, the King and Queen presented their Hands to all of us one with another with singular kindness; and so we were to get up on Horseback. Here I desire to have the Reader friendly intreated not to interpret the following Narration to any vain glory or pride of mine, but to credit me thus far, that if there had not been a special necessity in it, I could very well have utterly concealed this honour which was shewed me. We were all one after another distributed amongst the Lords. But our old Lord, and I most unworthy, were to ride even with the King; each of us bearing a snow white Ensign, with a Red Cross: I indeed was made use of because of my Age, for we both had long grey Beards, and Hair. I had besides fastened my tokens round about my Hat, of which the young King soon took notice, and demanded if I were he, who could at the Gate redeem these tokens? I answered in most humble manner, Yea. But he laughed on me, saying, There henceforth needed no Ceremony; I was HIS Father. Then he asked me, Wherewith I had redeemed them? I replied, with Water and Salt: whereupon he wondered who had made me so wise; upon which I grew somewhat more confident, and recounted unto him how it had happened to me with my Bread, the Dove, and the Raven, and he was pleased with it, and said expressively, That it must needs be, that God had herein vouch safed me a singular happiness. Herewith we came to the first gate where the Porter with the blessed Clothes waited, who bare in his Hand a supplication. Now as soon as he spied me even with the King, he delivered me the supplication, most humbly beseeching me to mention his ingenuity towards me before the King: Now in the first place I demanded of the King, what the condition of this Porter was? who friendly answered me, That he was a very famous and rare Astrologer, and always in high regard with the Lord his Father. But having on a time committed a fault against Venus, and beheld her in her Bed of rest; This punishment was therefore imposed upon him, that he should so long wait at the first Gate, till some one should release him from thence. I replied, may he then be released? Yes, said the King, if any one can be found that hath as highly transgressed as himself, he must stand in his stead, and the other shall be free. This word went to my Heart, for my Conscience convinced me that I was the offender, yet I held my peace, & herewith delivered the supplication. As soon as he had read it, he was mightily terrified, so that the Queen, who (with our Virgins, and that other Queen besides, of whom I made mention at the hanging of the Weights) rid just behind us observed it, & therefore asked him, what this Letter might signify. But he had no mind that he should take notice of it, but putting up the Paper, began to discourse of other matters, till thus in about three hours time we came quite to the Castle, where we alighted, and waited upon the King into his forementioned Hall. Immediately the King called for the old Atlas to come to him in a little Closet, and shewed him the writing, who made no long tarrying, but rid out again to the Porter to take better Cognizance of the matter. After which the young King with his Spouse, and other Lords, Ladies and Virgins sate down. Then began our Virgin highly to commend the diligence we had used, and the pains and labour we had undergone, requesting we might be royally rewarded, and that she henceforward might be permitted to enjoy the benefit of her commission. Then the old Lord stood up too, and attested that all that the Virgin had spoken was true, and that it was but equity that we should on both both parts be contented. Hereupon we were to step out a little; and it was concluded that each man should make some possible wish, and accordingly obtain it; for it was not to be doubted, but that those of understanding would also make the best wish: So we were to consider of it till after Supper. Meanwhile the King and Queen for recreations sake, began to fall to play together. It looked not unlike Chess, only it had other Laws; for it was the Vertues and Vices one against another, where it might ingeniously be observed with what Plots the Vices lay in wait for the Vertues, and how to re-encounter them again. This was so properly and artificially performed, that it were to be wished, that we had the like game too. During the game, in comes Atlas again, and makes his report.
port in private, yet I blushed all over.
For my Conscience gave me no rest; after which the King presented me the supplication to read, the Contents whereof were much to this purpose: First he wished the King prosperity, and increase; that his seed might be spread abroad far and wide. Afterwards he remonstrated that the time was now accomplished, wherein according to the Royal promise he ought to be released. Because Venus was already uncovered by one of his Guests, for his observations could not lie to him. And that if his Majesty would please to make a strict and diligent enquiry, he would find that she had been uncovered, and in case this should not prove so to be, he would be content to remain before the Gate all days of his life. Then he sued in the most humble manner, that upon peril of Body and Life he might be permitted to be present at this Nights Supper, he was in good hopes to spy out the very Offender, and obtain his wished freedom. This was expressly and handsomely indicted, by which I could well perceive his ingenuity, but it was too sharp.
sharp for me, and I could well have endured never to have seen it. Now I was casting in my mind whether he might perchance be helped through my wish, so I asked the King, whether he might not be released some other way? No, replied the King, because there is a special consideration in the business. However, for this Night, we may well gratifie him in his desire; so he sent one forth to fetch him in. Mean time the Tables were prepared in a Spacious Room, in which we had never been before, which was so compleat, and in such manner contrived, that it is not possible for me only to begin to describe it. Into this we were conducted with singular Pomp, and Ceremony. Cupid was not at this time present. For (as I was informed) the disgrace which had happened to his Mother, had somewhat angred him. In brief, my offence, and the Supplication which was delivered were an occasion of much sadness, for the King was in perplexity how to make inquisition amongst his Guests, and the more because thus even they too, who were yet ignorant of the matter, would come to the knowledge of
of it. So he caused the Porter himself, who was already come, to make his strict surveigh, and shewed himself as pleasant as he was able. Howbeit at length they began again to be merry, and to bespeak one another with all sorts of recreative and profitable discourses. Now how the treatment and other Ceremonies were then performed, it is not necessary to declare, since it is neither the Reader's concern, nor serviceable to my design. But all exceeded more in art, and human invention, than that we were overcharged with drinking. And this was the last, and noblest Meal at which I was present. After the Banquet the Tables were suddenly taken away, and certain curious Chairs placed round about in circle, in which we together with the King, and Queen, both their old Men, the Ladies and Virgins, were to sit. After which a very handsom Page opened the abovementioned glorious little Book, when Atlas immediately placing himself in the midst, began to bespeak us to the ensuing purpose. That his Royal Majesty had not yet committed to oblivion the service we had done him.
him, and how carefully we had attended our duty, and therefore by way of retribution had elected all and each of us Knights of the Golden Stone. That it was therefore further necessary not only once again to oblige our selves towards his Royal Majesty, but to vow too upon the following Articles, and then his Royal Majesty would likewise know how to behave himself towards his liege People. Upon which he caused the Page to read over the Articles: which were these.

I. You my Lords the Knights, shall swear, that you shall at no time ascribe your order either unto any Devil, or Spirit, but only to God your Creator, and his hand-maid Nature.

II. That you will Abominate all Whoredom, Incontinency and Uncleaness, and not defile your order with such Vices.

III. That you through your Talents will be ready to assist all that are worthy, and have need of them.

M 4 IV.
IV. That you desire not to employ this honour to worldly Pride and high Authority.

V. That you shall not be willing to live longer than God will have you.

At this last Article we could not choose but laugh sufficiently, and it may well have been placed after the rest, only for a conceit. Now being to vow to them all by the King's Scepter, we were afterwards with the usual Ceremonies installed Knights, and amongst other Privileges set over Ignorance, Poverty, and Sickness; to handle them at our pleasure. And this was afterwards ratified in a little Chappel (whither we were conducted in all Procession) and thanks returned to God for it. Where I also at that time to the honour of God hung up my Golden Fleece and Hat, and left them there for an eternal memorial. And because every one was there to write his Name. I writ thus;

Summa
Others writ otherwise, and truly each as seemed him good. After which we were again brought into the Hall, where being fated down, we were admonished quickly to bethink our selves what every one would wish. But the King and his party retired into a little Closet, there to give audience to our wishes. Now each man was called in severally, so that I cannot speak of any man’s proper wish, I thought nothing could be more praiseworthy than in honour of my order to demonstrate some laudable vertue. And found too that none at present could be more famous, and cost me more Trouble than Gratitude. Wherefore not regarding that I might well have wished something more dear and agreeable to my self, I vanquished my self, and concluded, even with my own peril, to free the Porter my Benefactor. Wherefore being ing now called in, I was first of all demanded, whether, having read the supplication, I had observed, or suspected nothing concerning the offender?—upon which I began undauntedly to relate how all the business had passed. How through Ignorance I fell into that mistake, and so offered my self to undergo all that I had thereby demerited. The King, and the rest of the Lords wondered mightily at so un-hoped for confession, and so wished me to step aside a little. Now as soon as I was called for in again, Atlas declared to me, that although it were grievous to the King's Majesty, that I whom he loved above others, was fallen into such a mischance, yet because it was not possible for him to Transgress his ancient usages, he knew not how else to absolve me, but that the other must be at Liberty, and I placed in his stead, yet he would hope that some other would soon be apprehended, that so I might be able to go home again. However, no release was to be hoped for, till the Marriage Feast of his future Son. This Sentence had near cost me my life, and I first hated my self and my twatling Tongue, in that I could not hold my peace, yet at last I took courage, and because I considered there was no remedy, I related how this Porter had bestowed a token on me, and commended me to the other, by whose assistance I stood upon the Scale, and so was made partaker of all the honour and joy already received. And therefore now it was but equal that I should shew my self grateful to my Benefactor: and because the same could no way else be done, I returned thanks for the sentence, and was willing gladly to sustain some inconvenience for his sake, who had been helpful to me in coming to so high place. But if by my wish any thing might be effected, I wished my self at home again, and that so he by me, and I by my wish might be at Liberty." Answer was made me, that the wishing stretched not so far. However I might well wish him free. Yet it was very pleasing to his Royal Majesty, that I had behaved my self so generously herein, but he was was afraid I might still be ignorant, into what a miserable condition I had plunged my self through this my curiosity. Hereupon the good man was pronounced free, and I with a sad heart was fain to step aside. After me the rest were called for too, who came jocundly out again, which was still more to my smart; for I imagined no other, but that I must finish my life under the Gate. I had also many pensive thoughts running up and down in my Head, what I should yet undertake, and wherewith to spend the time, at length I considered that I was now old, and according to the course of nature, had few years more to live: And that this anguish and melancholy Life would easily dispatch me, and then my door-keeping would be at an end: And that by a most happy Sleep I might quickly bring my self into the Grave. I had sundry of these thoughts. Sometimes it vexed me that I had seen such galant things, and must be robbed of them. Sometimes it rejoiced me that yet before my end I had been accepted to all all joy, and should not be forced to shamefully to depart. Thus this was the last and worst shock that I sustained: During these my Cogitations the rest were ready: Wherefore after they had received a good night from the King and Lords, each one was conducted into his Lodging. But I most wretched Man had no body to shew me the way, and yet must moreover suffer my self to be tormented, and that I might be certain of my future function, I was fain to put on the Ring, which the other had before worn. Finally, the King exhorted me, that since this was now the last time I was like to see him in this manner: I should however behave my self according to my place, and not against the order: Upon which he took me also in his Arms, and kissed me, all which I so understood, as if in the morning I must sit at my Gate.
